American Starts Fund for Police Dead

MONEY FOR WIDOWS AND ORPHANS OF MEN WHO DIED ON DUTY

A fund for the benefit of the heroic policemen who died in line of duty in the Pickwick Club disaster was inaugurated today by the Boston Evening American.

It was started on its way with a gift of $1,000 by this newspaper.

The purpose of the fund is to see to it that the self-sacrifice of the men in blue shall not entail suffering and want for those dear to them, now widowed and orphaned.

Contributions should be mailed to the Pickwick Club Disaster Editor, Boston Evening American, Hearst Building, Winthrop square.

A committee of prominent and universally trusted citizens is to be organized a little later to take charge of the fund, and decide the method of its collection and distribution.

At least two policemen are known to have perished when the famous night club collapsed in ruin and crushed the lives out of more than two score men and women.

They were:

WORKER AT RUINS SEIZED AS LOOTER

Despite the number of workers crowding the tragic ruins of the Pickwick Club and the confusion incidental to recovering the bodies, only one of them is alleged to have taken advantage of the situation to profit out of the wreckage.

He is Angelo Cook, forty-seven, of Meade street, Everett, a laborer, who was arrested today by Patrolman Joseph McDonough of the Lagrange street station, charged with larceny from an unidentified person.

The police say Cook was working with 200 other laborers on the tangled wreckage when a companion found money in the debris. Cook is

CAILLAUX COMING IN HUNT FOR BILLION

Paris, July 6 (I.N.S.).—The question of the suggested visit of Finance Minister Caillaux to Washington and the projected French loan were cleared up today.

The Finance Minister officially announced that Caillaux probably would go both to London and Washington in August to negotiate the final details of debt funding and at the same time determine conditions for a new loan of a billion dollars.

COOLIDGE FROWNS ON 2D TERM 'BOOM'

A boom for the re-election of President Coolidge, started by Swampscott by David W. Mulvane, Republican national committeeman from Kansas, and one of the most conservative party leaders in the West, received a cool reception at the hands of the President today.

Mulvane's declaration, undoubtedly were well intended, but untimely, according to Summer White House spokesmen. According to advices from White Court, the President feels that if it is understood that he is a candidate for re-election, it would be likely to embarrass his administration. Under these conditions, it is said, he feels his future

ENGINEERS ON SCENE IN OPENING OF JURY PROBE; SEARCH FOR MORE BODIES GOES ON

A total of forty-three recovered dead was reached today in the Pickwick Club disaster, as the Suffolk Grand Jury went into session to fix responsibility, and as records at the State House were being unearthed to show that the club operated illegally.

No such organization as the Pickwick Club, Inc., exists on the State records. The charter held at the tragedy address, No. 6 to 12 Beach street, was issued to the Commercial Men's Club, Inc.

Working to Get at Last Bodies.

A request to have the name changed to The Pickwick Club, Inc., was denied by the corporations commissioner, because the organization had not furnished required information. Yet thereafter the club operated and did business under the Pickwick designation, for which it held no charter.

Although the wearied diggers in the death pit yawning beside the fated Pickwick Club have bored deep into the ruins, it is believed that many more bodies are yet crushed under the tangled wreckage.

With every few digs of a pick, the 200 or more firemen and laborers turn up some woman's trinket—a broken bracelet, a ring ripped from a finger, a beaded handbag, a pair of glasses, a wrist watch—even money.

A money find brought grief today to one laborer, who was arrested after he was alleged to have pocketed the money found in the debris. This one isolated instance of alleged theft, however, has been the only one to mar the heroic performance of the workers.

It may be days before the last of the bodies are re-

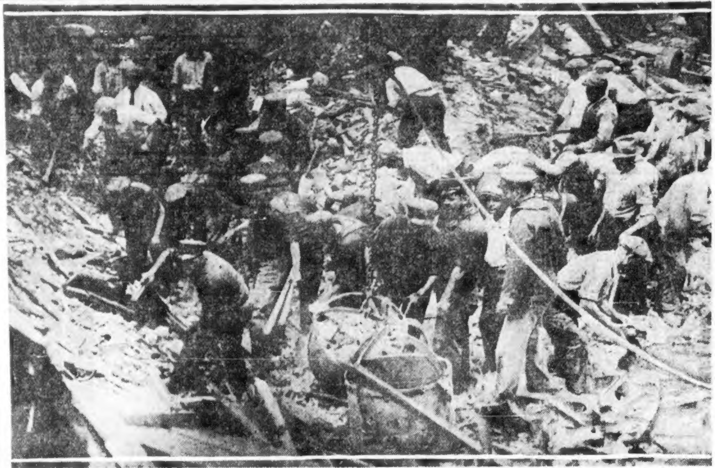
DEATH ENDED CARD PARTY AT MOMENT OF "SHOW DOWN"

WHERE 6 BODIES WERE FOUND



At this spot alongside the wrecked Pickwick Club ruins were found six bodies of the victims, among them that of Police Inspector Alexander. All were in a radius of fifteen feet and evidently were close together when they were pitched down with the collapse of the floor.

covered. The odor from the victims still buried in the ruins is the only thing guiding the rescuers in their work of locating the bodies.

While police lines held back the thousands of spectators that press to get near the scene of the disaster, now and then a body is lifted from the shambles and carried away to the mortuary, where a medical examiner carefully examines each body for marks of identification.

Early today more than a dozen pocketbooks and handbags such as are carried by women were unearthed. Rescuers were certain that somewherre near would be found a cluster of bodies.

Of the bodies recovered two remain unidentified. Both are men.

One is the body of a man apparently about 25 years of age. A gold fountain pen and a silver pencil found in the blue serge suit of the victim it is believed will lead to identification.

The other victim was so badly mutilated that the medical authorities are unable to estimate his age. He is five feet eight inches in height and wore a gray worsted suit. His shirt is lavender with soft collar size 15, while his shoes were brown The pompadour he wore was the striking characteristic of his face.

The work of searching for the bodies has been placed in charge of John M. Connors of No. 38 Higa street, an experienced wrecker.

Police ambulances stand near the scene of the disaster, and as each body is uncovered it is placed in a covered basket and removed to the mortuary, where efforts to establish identification are made.

SCORES BESIEGE POLICE.

As the news of the disaster became general, scores of men and women besieged the authorities with requests for information about members of the family who had dropped out of view over the week-end.

Dozens of persons who left the city to spend the Fourth of July out of town without telling their families of their plans, were at first reported among the missing. Today a majority of these returned to their homes, and their names were promptly removed from the list of suspected victims.

So rapidly did the bodies come into view at one time during the search that the workers ran out of the long wicker baskets in which the dead are carried to the mortuary. A new supply was obtained from the Northern Mortuary.

In the water-soaked pit of the garage excavation adjoining the club of tragedy and into which the wreckage fell, 300 men labored today, as they have labored since the dawn of Saturday, in an attempt to uncover other victims of the "night before" dance to death.

The gruesome wicker baskets, long and oval in shape, lined with white oilcloth, still wet from the last swabbing off with disinfectant, were ranged along the pit, waiting for new and broken cargoes.

Delving far down under the debris, in a subterranean chamber formed freakishly by splintered timbers, upended and forming supports, John J. Sullivan, a building wrecker from South Boston, came upon a tableau that brought amazement to his dust-filled eyes.

Around a table were seated four men and on the table top was a gallon can filled with alcohol.

A few feet away, a woman lay crumpled in death on the floor, much as if she had saged down in a stupor.

The four men sat with heads bowed low to the table, as if in submission. Their dead hands were outspread before them and the faces of playing cards were seen in the faint light filtering from above.

It was the show down. Sullivan carried them out, one by one, including the woman.

A short time later Sullivan came across another freak of tragedy. It was a fighting man, stiff and cold in death, but still crouched in battle pose, with left fist clenched and arm raised in guard and with right arm drawn back and the knuckles gripping for a knockout.

The stance was a perfect ring stance, and as if this were not enough to mark him as a fighter, he had a cauliflower ear. He was a grim battler, in a club of many battles, but death had won.

Nineteen bodies had been recovered and identified when Fire Chief Sennott, perceiving a menace in a fragment of wall still standing, ordered it knocked down.

The spilling of more debris into the death pit slowed up the search work for a time unutil the new debris could be removed, but the precaution was a wise one.

CRUSHED UNDER STOVE

Digging then at a point under where the dance floor had been, the weary firemen, working shoulder to shoulder with laborers more used to the gruelling toil, unearthed three bodies.

Then came three more and then another and another, until the recovered dead totalled 43.

The 25th body was that of a woman in dancing costume. A cook stove was crushing down her breast. Then a patch of green was disclosed as a green dress, clothing a girl on whose feet were tan shoes.

The 27th, 28th and 29th bodies were those of men, the 28th being identified later as that of Lawrence Nugent of No. 40 Fenwood road.

The 30th body was a woman, with coat and hat on. Next was a man, and closely following came the body of a girl.

Police Inspector Alexander's body was the thirty-third to be unearthed in the ruins. His face gave evidence of the terrific struggle he had made to live against odds.

The bodies of three men followed in a group, the thirty-sixth body taken being identified at the morgue as that of Johnny Duffy, one of the four singers at the Pickwick Club. Workers then said they believed they sighted four more bodies jammed together.

At the morgue also was identified William Murray, thirty-five, of No. 8 Hamilton road, Somerville.

MAN'S BODY STRETCHED.

At one place in the tangled wreckage, searchers came upon the body of a man and willing hands laid hold to tug it out.

Inch after inch the corpse emerged, but when five feet of its length, and then six and seven feet continued to come, the rescuers gasped.

Not until nearly ten feet of man had been pulled from the jagged mass of twisted steel and wood was the body freed, and then the phenomenon of the long, thin man was explained.

In the collapse of the building, this victim had [illegible] caught, head and feet, and [illegible] stretched. Every bone [illegible] out of its socket.

Police who have formed a half-cordon in the collapse terrain since the roar of the crumbling building awoke Boston to horror, captured four men, at first alleged to have been looting clothing left in the Pickwick Club checkroom by victims.

LOOTER SUSPECT SHOT.

Three shots were fired at the quartet by policemen in a race up an alley beside the Olympic Theatre and up a fire escape to the roof of a building whose rear wall composed the fourth wall of the collapsed club.

One man was wounded, the bullet passing through the coat-sleeve of another officer, but all four fugitives were captured on the roof.

Harrowing tales of horror and terror are related by the comparatively few survivors who escaped from the structure of carnage—they know not how.

There are tales of narrow escapes related, stories of just having left the club for home—and there are stories of a few who were just about to leave and who were claiming their relapse when they were carried down into the death pit, smashed by the weight of a roof and three floors crashing down on the heads of the revelers on the second floor.

More than 10,000 persons were blocked by the police in their attempt to reach scene of the disaster. A dead line was established at each end of Beach street, at Harrison avenue and at Washington street. Ropes and crowbars were used as supports to keep the dead line clear.

Finding it impossible to get into that end of Beach street without a necessary credential, crowds flocked into LaGrange street and took a long distance view of the outer space near the quarters of the ill-fated Pickwick Club building. Other milled through an areaway in the rear of Boylston street and were driven off by details of police.

CROWLEY CALLS RESERVES.

Superintendent Crowley summoned reserves from each of the outlying stations and placed them at the disposal of Captain Herbert Goodwin of the LaGrange street station. The crowd became so dense at Harrison avenue and Beach street, it was necessary for the reserve officers to form a wedge to make an opening to enable auto vans filled with debris to pass.

Commissioner Wilson and Superintendent Crowley stayed on the job all day and assisted frequently in settling controversies which arose between consequential persons and the police regarding their right to stay inside the ropes. At one time it was necessary for them to rebuke parties for not obeying police orders.

alleged to have pushed his companion aside and to have taken the money.

He was booked for central court.

Five Captured, One Shot, in Chase at Wreckage

Racing through an alley leading into the ruins of the Pickwick Club and up a fire escape to a roof overlooking the wreckage, four men were captured by the police after one had been wounded with a shot from a policeman's revolver.

The four were reported to the police as engaged in looting the check room of the Pickwick wreck, but when the police investigated the men were found on the fire escape leading down into the alley beside the Olympia Theatre.

William Robinson of No. 56 Linden avenue, Malden, the man shot, who declares he is Billy Robson, a boxer, denied to the Boston Evening American that he was on the premises for any reason than to gain a vantage point on the roof where he, with a companion, could watch the rescue work below.

GRAZES POLICEMAN.

The shot, fired by Patrolman Gerard A. Carthy of the East Dedham street station, after passing through the left arm of Robinson, shot upward and pierced the coat-sleeve of Patrolman William Dumas of Jamaica Plain station, standing on the roof with another officer, waiting for the running four to come up the escape.

Robinson, at City Hospital, was under guard of Patrolmen Conroy and Montgomery of the East Dedham street station, and was under arrest as a suspicious person.

The three other men were also arrested as suspicious persons. They were Timothy Sullivan of Malden, Paul J. Powers of Winchester, and Alfred Bishop of Castleton street, Roxbury.

Police claim the four men first entered the Grand Garden Chinese and American restaurant on the second floor of the building at Washington and Beach streets, the rear wall of which formed the fourth wall of the Pickwick Club.

It is alleged that the restaurant, which was closed yesterday as a safety precaution, was looted and a fur coat taken. The fur coat was found later on the roof.

FOUR BULLETS FLY.

The four men were running through the alley and were just starting up the fire escape as Patrolman Carthy and Potrolman Peterson of the Charlestown station, swung into the alley, with an order to halt.

When the halt did not come, Carthy fired two shots, neither of which took effect. Beneath the fire escape, he fired again, the bullet hitting Robinson, the last man, as he climbed up after his companions.

Robinson then stopped, but the three others continued to the roof, where they were captured by Patrolman Dumas of Jamaica Plain and Patrolman Amelot of East Dedham st. station.

According to the police, Robinson, on the way to the Lagrange street station, had a soft hat and a cap with him and attempted throw the soft hat out of the patrol.

CLUB SINGER AT DOOR AS BIG CRASH CAME

Narrower than the narrowest was the escape from death in the Pickwick Club collapse by Frank Decker, of No. 4 Swain's Pond avenue, Melrose, one of the four singers at the club.

Relating to the Boston Evening American the tale of his close escape, young Decker declared that from the third floor of the structure to the roof there was so little structure remaining after the recent fire, that a person on the third floor could look upward and see the sky.

"I was at the upstairs door, kicking on it to get in," said Decker. "Jimmy Glennon usually guards this door, but his girl was in that night and I knew he was sitting with her at a table over near the wall.

CHANGED HIS MIND.

"I had been in the club only five minutes before and had asked a girl to dance. She had the next dance promised, so I went out for a little while, leaving Bubber Murray, Johnny Duffy and Johnny Scales, the other singers, inside. I was going over to the St. Regis to get something I had left.

"Downstairs, I changed my mind, however, and after taking a few breaths of air, I went back. I got by the street door tender—the street door is always locked and you have to show your card—and went up the stairs to the door leading into the club.

"Your card gets you in from the street, but it's at the second door where, if they don't like your face, they won't let you in.

"I kicked on the door when nobody answered and then I heard a few cracks like small firecrackers. They had set off some firecrackers while I was singing, so I thought it was some more.

THEN CAME THE CRASH.

"Then there was a loud crash and a 'boom' and I beat it downstairs for the street without thinking. A crowd was outside trying to get into the club, but it was already jammed upstairs with about 200 people and they couldn't make it.

ARRESTS ARE THREATENED IN TRAGEDY

O'Brien Opens Probe of Pickwick Horror Before Grand Jury Today

wick Club disaster will be sought by District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien.

The District Attorney was in a fighting mood as he prepared to appear before the Suffolk County Grand Jury today.

"Some one is responsible for this disaster and its up to us to find out who it is," the District Attorney declared.

"The moment I find evidence to warrant it I shall ask for indictments for those responsible," the public prosecutor continued.

The District Attorney declared that he was fully cognizant of the fact that city and State officials are busy in their efforts of "pass the buck."

BUILDING SAFE.

The utmost significance is attached to the statement of James J. Hendrick, an inspector of the city building department. Less than forty-eight hours before the five-story club building collapsed, Hendrick inspected the structure and found it entirely safe.

Immediately following the disaster, reports were current that the club building had been reported as "unsafe." These reports were denied by Inspector Hendrick.

The fact that there had been a fire in the building a short time before the disaster led to a more careful inspection than usual, Mr. Hendrick declared.

"I went all through the building last Thursday from the roof to the cellar," said Mr. Hendrick. "There were four or five laborers in there cleaning up some of the loose dirt and debris caused by the recent fire. On the roof I found a crew of carpenters placing tar paper over the new top that had been placed on the building.

"I thoroughly examined all the burned timbers on the three top floors where the fire damage was greatest. Although much of the woodwork was charred, the supporting timbers were not sufficiently damaged to warrant the installation of new beams. The club quarters on the second floor were not damaged by the fire.

NO CAUSE FOR WRONG.

"Inasmuch as the three top stories were unoccupied and was entirely vacant of machinery or heavy stock of any kind, there was no cause to worry about weight threatening the collapse of the building.

"As far as I could observe the building was entirely safe. It was not necessary to shore the structure from the outside with beams, because one of the finest firms in the country—Charles R. Gow, I refer to, the man who directed the building of the Army Base in South Boston—had put underneath the old foundation of the building a substantial concrete base.

"This base was of sufficient strength to hold the five-story structure above it. With such a foundation, why was it necessary to shore it on the outside with beams? The concrete base was sunk far enough to prevent the steam shovels working on the new Jordan Marsh garage site, on the adjoining lot, from loosening it. The steam shovels were not down far enough to get underneath the building's reinforced foundation."

Governor Fuller has taken charge of the situation personally as far as the State of Massachusetts is concerned, and has ordered a thorough and sweeping investigation. Today State inspectors started gathering all available data leading up to the tragedy, and this information will be placed before the responsible State authorities for such action as is permitted under the laws of the State.

Every fragment of fact and information, backed by photographs of the scene and charred timbers that made up part of the structure, will be laid before the jurors and the history of the club and the building itself will be presented.

RECOVER REPAIR PERMIT.

Captain Ainslee C. Armstrong of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation has been working in co-operation with the District Attorney and the official police photographer took pictures of four burned stanchions or supports which held up the upper floors of the building, also other fire-charred timbers and parts of the tar-papered roof.

A building repair permit, tacked to the structure, was recovered by Captain Armstrong and will be an exhibit.

Guy Emerson, engineer for the Finance Commission, at the request of District Attorney O'Brien, measured the terrain and took a survey of that part where shoring is claimed to have been erected two days before the collapse.

Other engineers, representing Stone & Webster Company, Otis Pease, Charles T. Maine and more concerns, assisted Engineer Emerson in his survey.

MRS. CURLEY WITH MAYOR AT RUINS

City Executive Orders Complete Demolitiin of the Wrecked Building

Mrs. James M. Curley accompanied her husband, the Mayor, to the scene of the fatal building collapse today and was at his side as he gave orders for the complete demolishing of the structure in order that ten or more bodies, believed to be still in the ruins, could be recovered.

Mayor Curley's first move was to order a steam shovel, which was idle, into action. Then he held a long conference with Fire Chief Sennott.

The result of the conference was an order to attach huge cables to the few posts which were still erect holding up portions of the flooring. The 200 workmen in the pit beside the ruins were ordered out of the way and work began with steam winches to drag the posts from their places. As the first pillar crashed to the ground a shout of expectancy went up from the onlookers, but the expected crash did not follow.

Both men were married. Both left excellent records in the department. For both a rosy future seemed to lie just ahead.

LEAVES SIX CHILDREN.

Alexander was one of the most popular men in the department and one of the most efficient. He is survived by a wife and six children, the youngest eighteen months and the oldest nineteen years.

He was at the club in search of a thug suspected of robbing the Hall & Edwards jewelry store on Tremont street last week.

Inspector Alexander was an exceptionally conscientious police officer, who devoted to his profession a keen intellect and a stout heart.

He had "connections" which made him a sort of departmental authority on the underworld; it was he who was always chosen to go out and "pick up" some desperate character, in hiding after a crime.

Alexander had an unusually comprehensive knowledge of pickpockets,, their ways and their hangouts. He knew the methods of the various headliners in that form of crime and was a pillar of strength to the force when itc ame to combatting them.

HAD SPLENDID RECORD.

He was largely responsible for the round-up in connection with the Everett payroll robbery of 1919, the "pinch" in the Skinner jewelry robbery, the arrest of the Musical Burglars, some three years ago.

Inspector Alexander was forty-one years old and had held his latter rank for four years. He had been at headquarters about 10.

Patrolman Halloran, the othre police victim that the police know of, was thirty-two years old. He lived with his wife at No. 17 Inwood street, Dorchester.

Halloran was cited in general orders only a week ago for his activity in rounding up a holdup man who got from twenty-five to forty years in prison.

Before that he had won the good opinion of his superiors by his courage and his ability.

The management of the Boston Evening American feels that it is not necessary to sermonize to get the people of this city to respond to such an appeal.

Always there is the demand for efficient police. When such policemen die in line of duty, there is only one sensible way in which their memories can be honored and their heroism rewarded.

That is to take care of those dear to them, those they would have shielded with their lives if they had lived.

The Pickwick Club, Inc., held no charter to operate and do business under that name, it was discovered at the State House today by the Boston Evening American.

Holding no charter, the club, according to official understanding, was functioning illegally.

Because three changes of officers were noted in the State records within a single year of the organization's existence, it was intimated in some quarters today that the men given as holding office were acting for "silent" operatives of the club.

In the records of the Secretary of State's office no charter was ever issued to the Picwick Club, Inc.

"COMMERCIAL CLUB."

On May 20, 1924, a charter was issued to the Commercial Men's Club, whose directors and incorporators were given as Louis Rosenfield of No. 873 Beacon street; Max Pilder, No. 726-730 Washington street; Keron F. Clemans of Sagamore; Francis J. Nevins, No. 248 Nevada street, Newton; Edward F. Powers, No. 153 Warren avenue; James B. Troy, No. 230 Huntington avenue, and Joshua Paine of Provincetown.

Powers was recorded as president, Nevins as treasurer and Clemons as clerk.

The next record is in the office of the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation, in the form of a copy of a letter, dated December 17, 1924, and addressed to John C. Roth, No. 107 Pond avenue, Brookline. The letter text follows:

ORDER IGNORED.

"Dear Sir: Re. Commercial Men's Club, Inc. - The certificate of change of name of the above corporation has been received, but is returned herewith as you have omitted the number of members who voted for the change. Will you please insert this number and return at your earliest convenience."

No compliance with the direction is recorded in the State files and no charter change was ever made.

The next record, however, is a return last Januarf, giving a change of officers, a return made not on a social organization blank as usual, but on a "gas, electric and business corporations" form. This filing is required by law in case of a change of officers.

Unless old Father Neptune comes to Boston's assistance during the next few days the Hub is in for a hot wave. Chicago, St. Louis, Louisville and other points in the Middle West reported temperatures of eighty and above at 7 a. m.

Washington reported eighty-four degrees at 8 a. m. The hot wave will hit Boston sometime late today or Tuesday.

The skies will be clear today, but thunder storms are likely to occur in this vicinity Tuesday afternoon and evening.

NEW YORK MAN IDENTIFIES HIS WIFE'S CLOAK

The agony of uncertainty suffered by a Brooklyn, N. Y., man, following a terse telephone message from a New York police detective, was partly eased for Nathan Stern when he identified a black fur-trimmed cloak taken from the Pickwick ruins, as his wife's.

Mrs. Doris Stern of No. 69 Sumner avenue, Brooklyn, but formerly of No. 728 Commonwealth avenue, parked her car, a Hudson coach with New York license, outside the pickwick Club on the night before the Fourth.

It was found there after the crash. No one claimed it during all yesterday and New York was asked to find the owner. Chief Inspector Leahy of the New York police checked the number as Mrs. Stern's and then notified her husband, a traveling salesman.

From the edges of the crowd, Stern, with distraught mien and fear-lined face, worked up against the ropes that held back the thousands of curious, when police and firemen carried out of the shambles heap after heap of women's wraps, men's hats, odd slippers and shoes, vanity cases, jazz garters, torn fragments of clothing, buckles, handkerchiefs and other fragments of tragedy.

"I think," whispered Stern fearfully to the policeman, "I think that perhaps I can pick out something."

Every subterfuge known to the ingenuity of the curious had been worked on the police holding back the crowd, in various attempts to get within the lines, but the guardian sensed plainly that this was genuine.

"Go in, Buddy," he invited, and held up the rope.

Stern went to the pile in a police-guarded doorway. A glance into the heap and he had picked out a black, fur-trimmed cloak.

"It's her's," he gasped, and leaned weakly against the rough brick of the building.

The men in uniform turned away.

ADAMS SQ. TROLLEY SERVICE TIED UP

A Lechmere-bound two-car trolley train of the Elevated left the rails at Adams square at 9 o'clock last night, tying up service there for about an hour.

Lechmere trolleys as well as the northbound cars were turned back at Park square and the south-bound Lechmere cars were looped around at Scollay square. The accident did not stop service on any of the lines because of the available cross-overs and the two loops at the terminal.

Was On Death Edge

Frank Decker, a singer at the Pickwick Club, was at the door trying to get in when the building fell. He missed death by inches.

PICKWICK CLUB 'LITTLE ANGEL' KILLED

The "Little Angel" of the Pickwick Club is dead.

The men and women who are habitues of Boston's night life mourn today the passing of one of the most unusual characters in their circle.

Her real name was Ella Cauley. She was a waitress at the Pickwick Club, but to those who frequented the place she was known only as the "Little Angel."

Nineteen years of age, the waitress was an unusual character. Although closely connected with the wild, roistering night life of the city she was not of it. It was her proud boast that she had never tasted a drink of intoxicants in her life.

Time after time, however, she took occasion to counsel with the young girls who came to the club with the men who were "regulars" to her. Never obtrusive, she warned these girls of the pitfalls that were about them. Even the men of the club respected and admired her, although they knew she was opposed to the life they led and the moral code they followed.

When the club building collapsed the waitress was serving dinner to a party of three. Her mangled body was recovered hours later. It was immediately identified and was removed to the little apartment the "Angel" maintained for herself in Peterboro street, Back Bay.

Pickwick Club Cat Found Safe Amid Ruins

"Jo-Jo," the big gray cat, official mascot of the Pickwick Club, was found today roaming around the ruins.

The cat was thought to have perished when the building fell. It was missing all day Saturday and Sunday. Early today firemen caught a glimpse of the cat amid the debris.

Appearances indicated the cat had been held prisoner in the tangled ruins. Firemen saw the cat was fed and later turned it over to friends.

POLICE ESCORT EMPLOYES IN DEATH ZONE

Employes of concerns situated in the tragic Pickwick area, had the novel experience today of being escorted to their desks and benches by uniformed police.

During Saturday and yesterday—the double holiday—police were able to establish tight lines to block off the curious, but business was resumed today and a new situation had to be met, that of passing employes in.

Skilled in the detection of subterfuges to enter the lines, the cops were determined they would not be fooled today. As each person came up to the lines and declared himself or herself to be the employe of a concern within the barred zone, the name and address of the individual and of his concern was taken.

Then the stranger was admitted, but he discovered that the policeman was walking step for step with him, right to the address given.

Usually the employe really was an employe and everything was O. K. Not a few tricksters attempted the ruse, however, with the result that when their affiliation with the firm named was denied, they were promptly ushered outside the lines.

Fifty traffic officers were detailed to the collapse terrain today and for the first time since the dawn of Independence Day, traffic moved in orderly fashion along that part of Washington street and through Harrison avenue and Beach street from the avenue east.

The fatality block, of course, is still closed territory.

Death of W. J. Mahoney

W. J. Mahoney, assistant advertising manager for the Standard Woven Fabric Company, died at his home, No. 63 Willow avenue, Somerville, on Sunday. He is survived by two children, father, mother and two sisters.

UNAWED BY HOLIDAY TRAGEDY

Many Become Insolent When Barred From Resorts by Police Guards

Not even the horror of the tragic climax of death and injury at the Pickwick Club has lessened the craze of Boston men and women for the hectic atmosphere of the night clubs.

Eighteen couples who attempted to enter the Lambs' Club verged on insolence when informed by the police guard in front of its doors that they could not enter, the club building having been closed temporarily through an emergency order of the building department.

Several of the parties insisted upon entering and when threatened with arrest were loath to leave. Some of these directed their chauffeurs to drive "any place where there's jazz."

Today, the Lansdowne Club on Lansdowne street in the Fenway district, was added to the list of closed night clubs. The third club to have been closed in the Phalanx better known as the "Black and White."

All are guarded by details of police and last night Superintendent of Police Crowley personally saw that the closing order had been carried out.

Only a few parties attempted to enter the Black and White Club and these were evidently unaware of the closing order.

Injured by Auto

While playing on Bowdoin street, West End, Joseph Weinstein, five years old, of No. 65 Joy street, was struck by an automobile, owned and operated by Jacob Fritz of No. 1336 Massachusetts avenue. The child's skull was fractured.

CABARET SINGER AMONG MISSING

Gertrude Ainsworth, above, popular cabaret singer, who is reported to have lost her life in the Pickwick disaster.

One of the shocks administered to cabaret patrons and professionals out of the Pickwick Club tragedy was the news that Gertrude Ainsworth, in private life Mrs. Gertrude Runney, was listed among the missing.

"Trude" Ainsworth, formerly a Back Bay choir singer, living in Allston, long has been a well-known in Boston and Chicago night life, her clear soprano voice and bubbling personality contributing much to the entertainment of cabaret followers.

Several months ago a Boston hotel man, who since had died, was sued by the singer's husband for the alleged alienation of her affections.

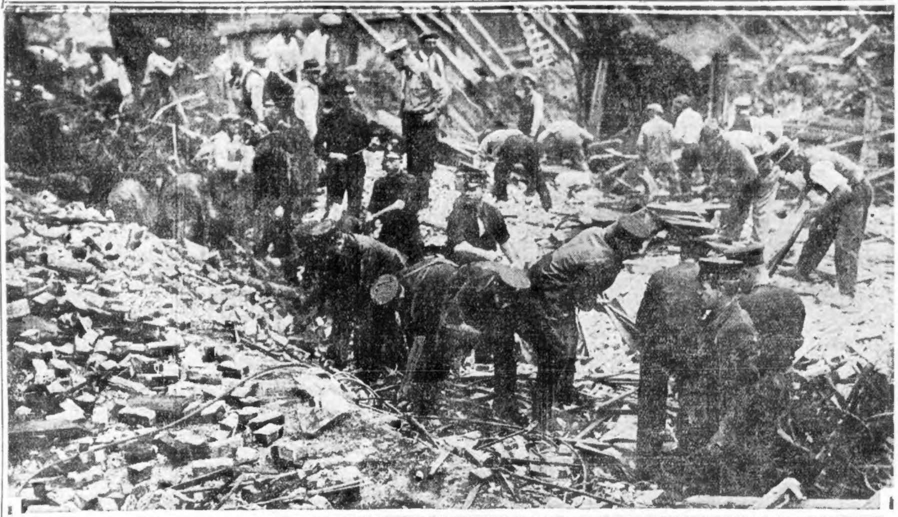
MOST OF VICTIMS SUFFOCATED AMID RUINS, SAYS LEARY

UNSUNG HEROES GRIMLY SEARCH FOR PICKWICK DEAD



The unsung heroes of the Pickwick Club tragedy are the firemen and laborers who hour after hour clear away the debris of the collapsed wall and floor of the Pickwith Club building. Photo shows them as day broke on the tragical scene, none seeking relief from their arduous toil.

DIE AFTER HOURS OF TORTURE

Firemen Handicapped by Lack of Equipment in Search for the Bodies

A majority of the more than two score victims who perished in the collapse of the Pickwick Club building died of suffocation, according to Medical Examiner Timothy Leary.

Although buried in the tons of wreckage of the five-story building that collapsed as they danced in their celebration of Independence Day, the revellers were not crushed by the falling timbers. They were imprisoned in the debris and, according to Dr. Leary, many lived for hours after the collapse of the building.

"L" LOANS EQUIPMENT.

For hours after the collapse of the building the work of rescue was poorly organized. Members of the fire department found themselves without adequate equipment to raise the mass of timbers and wreckage.

General Manager Dana of the "L" was on the scene a short time after the building fell in. He promptly placed the equipment of the road at the disposal of the wrecking forces. The Edison Company also sent equipment to the scene.

TELLS OF ESCAPE.

While the loss of life in the disaster was terrible, scores more of the 200 dancers who were trapped in the ruins of the building escaped.

Leo Romano, thirty-three, a West End grocer, was among those who escaped from the wreckage. At his home, at No. 35 Norman street, he told the story of his escape.

"When it crashed," he said. "I and a fellow called 'Slim Chick' made a dive for the wall away from the floor, which was giving away in the middle. Beams and things were falling all around us, but somehow we didn't seem to get hit. We stood still until things had stopped falling, and then we found ourselves in a sort of cave under the fallen rafters.

WENT DOWN WITH FLOOR.

"Next to us was Salvatore Jefferies, who had been just behind us when we ran for the wall. He was pinned down by a beam, but we lifted it off him and got him out. Someone on the outside laid a plank across to the wall, and we got to the street somehow.

"Frank Castelone and Jimmy Corso, who were with us, couldn't reach the wall and went down with the dance floor. They are in the City Hospital now—Frank with a fractured skull."

MAN SWEPT TO DEATH; WIFE ESCAPES

Torn from her husband's grip, Mrs. Frank Vara of Billerica street, West End, was hurled to safety when the Pickwick Club crashed, but her husband was carried down to death, she believes.

"I was dancing with Frank in the middle of the floor when the crash came," she said. "We were holding hands then, but when the lights went out and everybody started tumble around, I lost my grip on him.

"I managed to escape, but I don't know how. Somehow I was down the stairs and on the street. I looked for Frank but could find no trace of him. I waited all night, hoping against hope that he would be taken alive from the wreckage, but God has seen fit to spare only my life, I guess."

ALEXANDER WAS HUNTING THUG WHEN HE DIED

Police Inspector Benjamin Alexander, who lost his life in the collapse of the Pickwick Club, died a martyr to his duty.

Alexander, rated as one of the keenest detectives on the Boston force, was at the club in search of a man sought as the thug who robbed the jewelry firm of Hall & Edwards on Tremont street of gems worth $10,000 last week.

When the Inspector's body was recovered, in an inside pocket was found a police circular with the photograph of "Art Best," the man believed guilty of the gem robbery. There were notations on the circular indicating that Alexander expected to find his man either at the Pickwick Club or at an apartment and had worked on it night and day. He had informed his superiors that he expected to make an arrest over the Fourth of July, but he did not disclose the clues he was following.

He arrived in the Pickwick Club and took a seat some time before the collapse of the building. His seat commanded a view of the entrance to the room and he sat, toying with a drink of ginger ale as he scanned those who entered the place.

The death of Alexander cast a pall of gloom about police headquarters today. The unfortunate officer was regarded as one of the ablest members of the force and his work was responsible for the solving of several of the most important crimes in Boston police annals of recent years.

A special order by the City Council to aid the family of Police Inspector Alexander and Patrolman Paul F. Halloran, who lost their lives in the Pickwick Club disaster, will be introduced today, according to a statement of City Councillor George F. Gilbody, who viewed the ruins.

Jazz Drum and Roses Were Left Untouched

A silent drum, scattered jazz instruments, an open piano and a faded bunch of flowers, drooping in a vase atop a desk, remain untouched at the ill-fated Pickwick Club.

Crashing timbers and falling bricks which crashed into the pit of death missed them. They are in the rear of what was the building, in a short section about ten feet in length that escaped the falling death.

The ceiling above the little isle of safety has fallen. It slanted down, forming a canopy of protection above them.

Below the little space, and filling the vast area covered by the debris is a mass of wreckage. Bricks had been ground into fine powder. Huge beams were reduced to kindling.

Yet when workmen, tearing away the covering of the dead, progressed downward they came upon one of the queer pranks that fate plays. Three fragile china plates, buried beneath the wreckage, were found undamaged. Not even a chip had been knocked from their delicate edges.

A more tragic note of the digging was sounded when workmen uncovered fragments of pretty party dresses, a few torn bits, ripped from the gowns of frolicking girls as they were plunged to their death.

PERISHED AS HIS 3 CHUMS ESCAPED

Property Man at Opera House Had Been at Club Only a Few Minutes

Bartholomew O'Donnell, No. 11 St. Charles street, South End, was in the Pickwick Club for only a few minutes before the fatal crash. He had met three chums from the South End and had gone to the night club to look on before leaving by automobile for Cape Cod, where he was to spend the week-end at a camp.

His three companions escaped death when the wall collapsed near the table where they were. O'Donnell was unable to reach the exit and was buried under an avalanche of plaster and stone.

He was well known in the South End, where he had lived since childhood. He was a member of Back Bay Council, No. 331, Knights of Columbus, and active in the affairs of that organization. He was also a prominent member of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes.

For four years O'Donnell had been property man at the Boston Opera House and worked until after midnight the night before the Fourth arranging the sets for the holiday performance. He had been a stage hand with the Shubert System for ten years.

He is survived by his parents, James and Margaret O'Donnell; two brothers, William J. and Thomas, and a sister, Margaret.

WIFE'S LAST DANCE COST HER LIFE

Trapped While Waiting at Checkroom of Pickwick Club

A last lingering dance, a yearning for the last bit of pleasure, cost Mrs. Margaret Murphy of No. 127 Warren street, Roxbury, her life in the Pickwick disaster.

The young mother, identified at the Southern Mortuary by her husband, William F. Murphy, decided on a last dance before she went to the check room for her wraps.

As they were being hunted up the collapse came, and Mrs. Murphy was carried to her death, while a girl friend escaped. The young mother is survived by her husband, a nine-year-old daughter, Esther; a father, Daniel McKinnon; two sisters and a brother.

ASK CONGRESS TO END HIGH COAL PRICES

U. S. Trade Board Demands Industry Be Restored to "Competitive Basis"

Washington, July 6 (A.P.).—Congress is asked in a report by the Federal Trade Commission to take steps to restore the anthracite industry to a "normal competitive basis" and thus assure an adequate supply at reasonable prices.

The report, dealing with past high prices of the fuel, viewed "persistent efforts of the Department of Justice to disintegrate the anthracite combination" as successful to a large degree and suggested similar action by Congress to obviate high premium prices in times of actual or anticipated shortage.

Complete restoration of competition in the industry, in the opinion of the commission, would be preferable to price regulation.

WINTHROP MAN, ON VISIT HOME, KILLS WIFE

Grasps Woman in Farewell Embrace and Slashes Throat With Razor

Dramatically holding his wife in a farewell embrace, William J. Cochran, forty-one years old, drew a razor and slashed the throat of his wife, Mrs. Anna A. Cochran, forty-eight years old.

Cochran was on leave from the Medfield State Hospital for a visit to his home at No. 26 Beal street, Winthrop. It is believed he became suddenly violently insane.

Cochran was sitting in the living room with his wife, his brother-in-law, James H. Doherty, and Doherty's half-sister, Miss Pauline Hanson and mother, Mrs. Honora Hanson, waiting for his brother George, who was to arrive on the two o'clock train from Boston. When he failed to appear, Doherty suggested that Cochran return to the hospital with him.

Infuriated by the suggestion, and crying out that Doherty was trying to separate him from his wife, Cochran seized a razor from a cabinet and sprang at Mrs. Cochran.

Before the others could interfere, he had cut her throat. She sprang from her chair while Doherty grappled with her husband, and staggered into the kitchen and then into the hallway where she fell dead.

Charlestown, N. H., July 6.—The reign of terror caused in five New Hampshire towns a short while ago by a gang of safe-crackers struck this village over the week-end.

While here, the crooks blew open two safes, tried to open a third and rifled the cash drawers and registers in two other business establishments. The loot is estimated at $200.

The safes in the drug store of Charles Nourse and Wright's grocery store were blown and $129 was taken from the former and $25 and some checks from the latter, according to the proprietors.

The cash drawers at the Kendall grain store and the Frank A. Hamlin store were rifled and a small sum stolen from each.

Three open carriages drew the party to the Royal Castle, Captain Amundsen and Lieutenant Ellsworth riding in the first carriage. CHINESE STRIKE LEADER KILLED BY U. S. SAILOR

Shot Down in Shanghai During Trouble Among the Strikers at Cotton Mill

Shanghai, July 6 (AP)—A Chinese strike leader, about to attack a municipal constable from behind, was shot and killed here by a sailor from the United States Destroyer MacLeish, who came to the rescue of the constable. The sailor's name was given as Dizik.

The shooting occurred during trouble at one of the cotton mills involved in the present strike.

Two foreigners who were in the mill and saw the entire affair said the action of the American sailor averted what promised to be a most serious situation.

The situation in Canton remained unchanged. Most of the Japanese residents, also most of the foreign missionaries, are leaving for Hong Kong.

U. S. Ship Rescues Nine Missionaries at Hongkong

Hong Kong, July 6 (Universal).—The U. S. S. Simpson returned here last evening after a successful but thrilling trip to rescue missionaries in Yeung Kong.

When the Simpson arrived at Yeung Kong a heavy sea was running and the first boat launched was capsized. Twenty-four of her crew were thrown into the sea. Twenty-two were rescued and two were missing.

The Simpson stood by that night and landed a party of marines the following morning. The missing sailors, Delhos and Ross, had been washed ashore and were safe with the missionaries.

The Simpson returned to Hong Kong bringing Fathers Ford, Drought and Fleason, and Sisters Magdalen, Rose, Dolores, Monica, Delourdes and Matthews.

'KIDNAP' STORY IS CALLED RUM RING FRAMEUP

Sheriff Doubts Two Men Were Chained to Trees 10 Days in Mountain Wilds

Chattanooga, July 6 (A.P.).—Declaring that the whole thing sounds suspicious, Sheriff Tom Selman today began an investigation into the story told by Dr. W. D. Mason, local veterinarian, and Lawrence Bowman, alleged feudist and aide of Federal prohibition officers, that they had been kidnaped on Signal Mountain and kept captive for ten days.

The two men, who disappeared on June 23 without trace, were found yesterday morning by Jim Thomas mountaineer, who was hunting stray hogs, handcuffed and tied to a tree in the wilds about fifteen miles from Chattanooga.

Bowman said that while driving along the road at night they were set upon by five hooded men, overpowered and taken into the woods. He said they were lured to the mountain by a fake telephone message.

When their disappearance became known, a reward of a thousand dollars was offered for the discovery of the men, dead or alive, and a large number of natives of the mountain joined in the quest.

The theory of the officers was that the men had been made victims by a band of feudists and moonshiners, the Bowmans having been at outs with what is known as the Godsey clan for several months, the trouble having its climax when Ike Bowman was killed by Sam Godsey some time ago.

Godsey, a deputy sheriff, in a statement said that the whole affair was a frameup, and that Bowman and Mason had plotted to make it appear that they were dead in order to engage in whiskey-making without interference.

MARSHMALLOWS HAVE REAL FOOD VALUE AND MANY USES

When you think of marshmallows do you think of them only as a delicious candy, forgetting the many, many other uses that they have, such as for frostings, cakes, salads, pies and puddings?

There is a brand new recipe book which has just been published by the Campfire Marshmallow Company of Cambridge and Milwaukee, which contains some of the finest marshmallow recipes that I have ever seen, and colored illustrations to show just how these unusual, yet not too complicated, recipes look when they are actually made. I'll be glad to send you one of these valuable little books if you will drop me a line.

Among the specially good recipes that the book contains are ones for marshmallow sponge cake, marshmallow frostings and fillings, marshmallow gingerbread, pudding sauces, marshmallow butterscotch pie, fruit salads and cocktails, baked apples with marshmallow, butterscotch marshmallow sauce for ice cream, and many other interesting sundae sauces.

Campfire Marshmallows are made at the new Campfire factory in Cambridge which supplies all New England, so that Campfire Marshmallows now reach you in the very freshest condition. These marshmallows are made with the utmost care to insure the highest purity and freshness of the product, and they come in many convenient sized packages. I think they would be a nice item to add to the emergency shelf as well as frequently to your daily shopping list.

Two or three cut up and mixed with bits of left-over preserves or canned fruit make an emergency salad or even a dessert. Float one on the kiddies cocoa and add a few to your favorite puddings and pudding sauces and see how improved they are. Children love to toast them and they make a wholesome sweet placed between graham crackers.

I have only a limited supply of the new Campfire Marshmallow recipe books, so don't delay in sending for yours, as I know you will get many helpful suggestions as well as reliable recipes from it. Every one of the Campfire recipes that I have tried have come out beautifully, and I'm sure you will have equally good results.

CAKES, COOKIES AND COOKING OIL

Corn Product Profitably Used in Many Ways

I want to talk a little bit today about our old friend Mazola, the cooking oil that is so economical and satisfactory in every way for deep fat frying and shortening and salad dressings. Today I had a letter from one of our Club Members telling me that she had made the most delicious strawberry shortcake this year, using Mazola instead of solid shortening. She said she simply used a baking powder biscuit recipe adding two or three extra tablespoonfuls of Mazola for eaach cup of flour used, and baked the cakes in a very hot oven for 15 to 20 minutes. She says that she never has made such tender mouth-watering shortcakes before, and is so grateful for the Mazola Recipe Book which I sent her some time ago and which contains this recipe.

Another member tells me that she has used the Devil's Food Cake recipe from this same book and put it together with a marshmallow filling, and she tells me that twenty-four hours after she makes this cake there isn't a crumb left in the house. As I said before, Mazola saves so much time in creaming sugar and shortening for cakes, cookies, muffins, etc. It makes excellent puddings, too, and delicious dark fruit cake that keeps moist and rich for many moons. Mazola is so convenient for oiling cake and muffin tins, too—so much easier to spread than cold grease.

Doughnuts, croquettes, fritters and potatoes are at their best deep fried in Mazola Cooking Oil, and I don't believe you realize how delicious fried fish can be until you have tried dredging it with flour or corn meal and frying it in deep hot Mazola Oil. Fish fried in this way will not be grease soaked and will, therefore, be much more wholesome. And of course, by this time I am sure most of you have tried the Mazola Mayonnaise Dressing, and made the Tartare Sauce and perhaps the Russian Dressing.

If you haven't already the Mazola Cook Book, do drop me a line, for in addition to some delicious recipes it has an excellent timetable for jelly making, and many other household helps.

MAZOLA-MAYONNAISE prepared at home IN 3 MINUTES- Try this recipe-

1 Cup Mazola
1 Egg Yolk
½ teaspoon Sugar
½ teaspoon Salt
½ teaspoon Paprika
3 tablespoons Lemon Juice or Vinegar

Add well mixed seasonings to egg, with one teaspoon lemon juice or vinegar and beat well, adding one teaspoon Mazola at a time until mixture thickens, after which the Mazola may be added more rapidly. Thin with lemon juice or vinegar when necessary.

WASHING OUT SUMMER STAINS

The Easy Way

This is the season of the year when laundry work proves extremely trying to most women.

Children's wash suits and underthings always get grimy. But in the Summer time they seem to absorb all the grass stains, peach stains, berry stains and other stains in sight. And the wash is filled to overflowing with men's soiled things, shirts with grimy and perspiration streaked collars and cuffs, perspiration stained undergarments, etc. Then there are your own house dresses and linens from the table, handkerchiefs, etc. Somehow or other all the Summer wash seems to be a collection of grime and stains.

Of course, it is useless to suggest greater care, as none of us stain things deliberately. So I think you will be interested in what I have to tell you about how easily and satisfactorily you can wash out all stains except rust. Just imagine! All those children's clothes and your own pretty things that you thought were stained beyond repair—will all wash out spotlessly clean and oh, so sweet and fresh.

Now for the secret of easy, painless extraction of stains and grime.

Many of you have heard me say something about the new oxygen soap product—Duz—that washes all kinds of fine laundry and general household laundry spotlessly clean and the whitest white you ever saw.

Well, this very same Duz that is so good for general washing is the very soap for washing out all sorts of stains except rust.

And this oxygen soap product washes so easily. Just put your things to soak a short time or over night. Then if you wish you can boil for a few minutes. After that—even the very worst stains will disappear as if by magic when you sprinkle a little of the dry Duz on the spots and rub them gently between your hands in the sudsy water.

You must not dissolve Duz in boiling water—just use tepid water. Then when you put your clothes to soak in the oxygen suds you really don't have to boil—or use a wash-board—or even use blueing. And it makes suds in hard water.

From Duz—to rinse water—to clothesline—is the way this oxygen soap washes your things spotless and snowy white.

And its action is so mild that it won't harm delicate fabrics. It even keeps your hands soft and white.

Next time I write about this wonderful oxygen soap I am going to tell you how well it destroys germs as it washes things out and sterilizes as it washes.

If you have never used Duz just send me a line requesting a sample and I'll see that you receive a regular size 10c package absolutely free. Then you can see for yourself how easily and effectively it washes away stains and grime.

TEA DELIGHTS

Many Delicious Summer Beverages Made with Tea

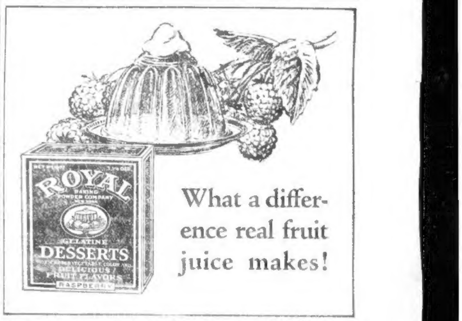
The days—and the nights—are certainly with us when hot, parched throats call for long draughts of cooling drinks. On a good hot day did you ever stop to think just how much your liquid intake has been, and were you ever a little bit appalled to stop and think how many mixtures you had poured into your defenceless stomach?

There really are no safer Summer drinks than those made with a tea foundation, and if you will use Tetley's Orange Pekoe as I do, you will be sure that you have chosen a brand especially adapted to icing.

Let's consider for a moment just how many healthful Summer beverages you can make from cold tea. First, there is a plain iced tea, made strong—strained, cooled and poured over cracked ice in tall glasses. This may be sweetened and lemon added if desired. Then there's Spiced Iced Tetley's that is simply delicious. This has just a suggestion of cloves, a sprinkling of sugar, a dash of lemon juice and is served with cracked ice and a maraschino cherry and a slice of orange on top.

Russian Tea is delicious made with Tetley's. Use freshly boiling water and the dried peel of an orange cut in small bits. Tea Julep is another delicious concoction which calls for carbonated water, a big sprig of fresh mint, and some fruit. Tetley Tea Frappe is good, too. This has some crushed pineapple and orange juice in it and is partially frozen. Then there's the real Tetley's Tea Punch which you have seen printed on this page before. I will be glad to send you any or all of these recipes if you would like to have them.

One thing is sure, when you serve Tetley's Orange Pekoe to your family, you know that you are serving a truly wholesome beverage full of real food value with just the amount of stimulation needed in this warm weather. I really can't say too much in praise of Tetley's and I am happy to tell you that every day I am receiving letters from members of the WNAC American Women's Club saying that since they sent for the free ten-cent package of Tetley's, they have not used any other brand, so delighted were they with its wonderful aroma and fragrance. Have you sent to me for your sample?



What a difference real fruit juice makes!

2D TERM BOOM IS DEPRECATED BY COOLIDGE

President Fears Political Significance May Be Attached to Present Acts programs and policies might be construed as being political.

THINKING OF COOLIDGE.

Mulvane is Summering at Magnolia on the Massachusetts North Shore.

He has been here for a conference with Secretary Sanders and will shortly meet President Coolidge. He was one of the dominant old guard leaders who won the nomination for Taft against Roosevelt at the Chicago convention of 1912, which resulted in the Bull Moose split and the election of Wilson.

"President Coolidge can have another term if he wants it," said Mulvane.

"There is no substantial opposition to him anywhere. The people are not thinking anything about first, second or third terms. They are thinking in terms of Coolidge.

STRONG IN WEST.

"He is exceedingly strong in the West. His strength comes as the result of the sound business methods he has applied to government. The farmers see their taxes reduced They know they benefit, indirectly, too, from the reduced expenses of the nation.

"They admire him as the head of their government and they respect him personally. There has been a bond of friendship between them and him since the memorable morning when he took the oath of office by the rays of the kerosene lamp in his father's Vermont farmhouse."

When he was president of the Massachusetts Senate his friends, including Frank W. Stearns, besought him for months to announce his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant-Governor. He declined and refused to permit his candidacy to be projected. On the day after the Senate adjourned he handed a slip of paper to Stearns and said to him, "You may give this to the press."

On it was written, "I am a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor."

Coolidge Has First Day of Real Rest

President Coolidge, on Sunday, for the first time since his arrival ten days ago at White Court, enjoyed a complete rest.

Arriving home from Divine service at the Tabernacle Congregational Church in Salem, soon after noon, the President and Mrs. Coolidge divested themselves of their formal church clothes, donned informal Summer attire, and spent the remainder of the day within the White Court enclosure.

Hour after hour, well into the evening, thousands of machines streamed along the beach front here, bent on catching a glimpse of the President and his wife on the White Court grounds, but all were obliged to turn homeward disappointed.

The very press of traffic in the White Court environs defeated the object for which the sightseers had come.

Informed of the crowded roads by "Dick" Jervis, chief of the secret service staff, President and Mrs. Coolidge decided to forego their usual afternoon stroll and contended themselves with whiling away the time on the seaward veranda of their Summer home.

VETS' LEADER ENDORSES INSURANCE

Head of Boston Bureau Takes Boston Evening American $7,500 Policy

Captain William J. Blake, Yankee Division veteran and regional manager of the United States Veterans' Bureau, with jurisdiction over the entire State, appreciate the value of insurance.

A single man, who makes his home with his mother, Captain Blake carried the government $10,000 policy and $5,000 life insurance in addition, before signing up for the Boston Evening American's $7,500 accident policy.

Captain Blake, who served with the 101st Infantry during the war, and is now attached to the staff of General Edward L. Logan, commanding the Twenty-sixth Division, M. N. G., is head of the largest governmental agency, second to the post office, in Massachusetts.

He has the care of 42,000 men, and the bureau has trained 13,500 in new vocations. He also has the responsibility of hospitalizing men at Chelsea Naval Hospital, U. S. Veterans' Hospitals in Rutland and Northampton and West Roxbury.

"Under the World War veterans' act," said Captain Blake, "the veterans' bureau can hospitalize any veteran who served in any war since 1897 who is in need of hospitalization, whether or not his disability was incurred as a result of his service. Since the passage of this amendment many men have received this free treatment in our hospitals. In other words, if such veteran meets with an accident on the street today the bureau can care for him without cost.

"My experience in contact with these cases has brought home to me benefits of an accident insurance policy, and I am very glad to take advantage of the Boston Evening American's accident policy."

You, too, can take advantage of the American's unusual offer. If you are a subscriber of the Home Delivery edition merely fill out the application on another page of this newspaper and forward it, together with $1, to the insurance department of the Boston Evening American.

You will automatically become insured, and your policy will be mailed to you.

If you are not a subscriber, fill out the blank and forward it in the same manner, and thereafter pay your regular delivery boy 13 cents a week for the Home Delivery Edition. Your policy will also be mailed to you.

A Thrilling Novel of Love and Adventure, Mystery and Intrigue that Every-One Will Want to Read

Louise Groody, star of "No, No, Nanette," now playing at the Tremont Theatre, posing as Sally in illustrating one of the dramatic episodes from this story.

"Oh," cried Sally as she saw the marked hand. The power to move and cry went from her. Lazare caught her by the arm and the hand with the scar covered her mouth.

SALLY MEREDITH, nervy niece of

M. FREDERICK LASALLE, war gas inventor, is intrusted with the secret of opening the red lacquer case containing the formula sought by spies of rival governments.

THE MARKED HAND appears at a window as Sally and her uncel confer. Sally, frightened, but brave, fruitlessly searches for the owner of the hand. That night the red lacquer case is stolen and Lasalle mysteriously disappears. The case is so constructed that the formula is destroyed if opened by one not in the secret.

MAJOR BILL ARMITAGE, seven years previously the sweetheart of Sally, appears in search of Lasalle. Unexpected meeting renews acquaintance, but Sally is coy and Bill blunders. At Smugglers' Leap Bill and Sally find Lasalle's fountain pen, mute evidence which adds to the fears of Bill. Sally clings to hope.

DETECTIVE WILLIAMS enters the mystery and takes up the trail of the stolen case. Sally is forlorn and Bill longs to comfort her. In fact he does, but Sally breaks away.

WOMAN OF MYSTERY asks Sally to open case. Reveals herself as one of the conspirators.

GOGGLED TERROR tries to force Sally to open case after the Woman of Mystery fails. She defies him and laughs at his threats. He foils her attempt to see his face and gets away.

ETTA SHAW, once friend of Sally, is in the plot to entrap the girl. Danger threatens! Etta in a double deal.

Read on and enjoy this wonderful story of love and mystery.

SALLY suspected nothing when Etta left her to telephone to the plotters, and, left alone, had decided that she felt exactly like a cat on a strange roof. She didn't think that she liked the roof very much, but she found the other cats distinctly intriguing. Really Etta's faculty for drifting into odd environments was amazing.

Etta came back rather breathless.

"And now we're going to have a treat," she announced. "Sascha's going to play for us—"

"Sascha?"

Etta repeated the name that sounded like three sneezes. "I call him Sascha," she added, "it's easier, and we are very intimate."

"It's certainly easier," said Sally.

She settled herself down to enjoy her afternoon, and to watch the people who now began to fill the room.

"Sascha" played to them, and Sally found his playing ordinary. In appearance he resembled any of those pallid, young men whom one may see playing first violin in a third-rate orchestra. He had the pasty skin, the large dark eyes, and the somewhat unwashed appearance common to them all; but when he laid aside his bow Etta Shaw turned tear-filled eyes upon Sally, and murmured, "Isn't he divine?"

It was after this that a fat young man with red hair and freckled hands got up and in a small high voice recited a poem entitled "Sunset."

"Good gracious!" said Sally. "Who is he?"

"Aubrey Cuthbert—the great poet. He wrote Dead Flies and Carrion."

"He would," said Sally, in tones of deep conviction.

Two hours later Sally had ceased to feel amused.

It was, therefore, with a feeling of considerable relief that she emerged with Etta into the dark and foggy street. The lamp posts had misty rainbows round them, the air was raw with a damp that might turn to frost at any moment. Sally snuffed it up with appreciation and realized how dreadfully stuffy the atmosphere of genius had been.

A closed car was drawn up to the curb and a chauffeur stood beside it, holding the door open. The light under the club portico showed him as a well set up man in neat, dark livery. He turned as they crossed the pavement, and Sally was startled by his extreme good looks. Etta poured out a flood of voluble directions whilst Sally took her seat; then she, too, got in, the door was shut, and the car moved off, gradually gathering pace.

Then Etta suddenly started, looked in her bag, and accused herself of being the most forgetful woman in the world.

"Telegrams," she explained, "telegrams that I ought to have sent off this morning, and they went right out of my head all through meeting you; and will you mind very much if I just stop and send them off now, for they really ought to go?"

Without waiting for an answer she directed the man to stop at the nearest postoffice. As the car stopped, she jumped out and left

LIFE GUARD IN DEATH STRUGGLE

Drowning Man Battles So Vigorously It Takes Three to Save Him

Life guards at Columbus Beach, South Boston, thrilled a crowd of 50,000 bathers, pedestrians and motorists, while they waged a desperate battle to save Fred DeCarl, twenty-two, of No. 11 Endicott street, Somerville, from drowning.

After the guards, three in number, had overpowered the man and carried him to shore, they had to work over him for more than an hour before he regained consciousness.

After an hour's rest, however, he was able to go to his home in the company of some friends.

SEIZED WITH CRAMPS.

DeCarl was swimming about 300 feet off shore when he was seized with cramps. The attack came so suddenly that he was unable to call for help and nobody in the huge throng of bathers realized his plight.

Life Guard John Hannon of the beach squad, though, noticed from his boat the suddenness with which DeCarl disappeared, and rowed quickly to the spot where he had gone down.

Jerry Murphy and Al McCoy, other members of the guard, who were on shore, noticed Hannon's actions and swam to the rescue.

BATTLE IN WATER.

Hannon, on reaching the scene, leaped overboard and came up with DeCarl, but the latter battled so stubbornly that Hannon was unable to place him in the boat.

Just when it began to seem as if Hannon would have to give up the struggle and allow DeCarl to fall back into the water, Murphy and McCoy came up and, with their assistance, he placed the man in the boat.

DeCarl was in bad shape when he was taken ashore and it was feared that he would not survive. The life guards worked frantically for an hour and a half before he was pronounced out of danger.

NEW 'SPEEJACKS' TO LEAVE ON TOUR TO EUROPE

Larchmont, N. Y., July 6.—The new auxiliary steel schooner Speejacks, in which Albert Y. Gowen of Cleveland hopes to broaden the tracks of the little motor boat of the same name which he drove round the world three years ago, was given her official trial in Long Island Sound. She will probably sail for Southern Europe sometime this week, with the owner, his daughter Margaret, and a party of friends.

The Speejacks is a 126-foot bald-headed knockabout schooner designed by William H. Hand, Jr., of Fairhaven, Mass., and built by the George Lawley & Son Company of Boston.

A meeting of the Car Service Division of the American Railway Association will be held tomorrow morning at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, with members from all over New England in attendence and a program which includes several speakers of national repute in matters of transportation. CORNFIELD IS SOUTH END BEAUTY SPOT

The five-year-old cornfield and flower garden is the creation of Charles H. Cook, for many years a resident of the old Jordan mansion, No. 1234 Washington street, South End, who by sheer perseverance has managed to make over a shabby, unfertile patch of ground into a spot of beauty. Corn and morning glories are the chief plants Mr. Cook cultivates, but for variety's sake he has a few bean vines, some sweet peas and pansies.

17 DIE, 11 HURT IN SUNDAY ACCIDENTS

New York, July 6 (A.P.).—Seventeen persons were killed and eleven injured in automobile, drowning, airplane and fireworks accidents throughout the country during the second day of the Fourth of July week-end. Automobile accidents contributed the greatest number of deaths and injuries, with ten dead and eight injured.

Four persons were killed when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by a Baltimore & Ohio train in Newark, O. Two were instantly killed and two others injured when the wheels of the automobile in which they were riding locked, throwing the machine into a telegraph pole in Hastings, N. Y. Two men were killed and two seriously injured in an automobile accident near Geneva, N. Y. An automobile collision near Pomona, N. J., was the cause of one death and four injuries.

A woman was drowned in Peekskill, N. Y., and a man who dived off a float at Staten Island was seriously injured.

One aviator was killed and his passenger injured at Curtis Field when the pilot lost control of the airplane while doing "stunts."

KLAN LIGHTS CROSS IN ATTORNEY'S YARD

Lunenburg, July 6.—District Attorney Emerson W. Baker of Worcester County, who prosecuted Klan and Anti-Klan rioters in Clinton District Court recently, was tendered a memento of the affair by unknown persons who erected a fiery cross in his back yard Sunday morning.

Shut-in Garden Goes Big After 5 Years

On upper Washington street where "L" trains and trolley cars charge past and shops and crowded houses overrun the district, a cornfield and flower garden flourishes sturdily with rows on rows of waving stalks and thriving foliage as if in defiance of the encroaching city streets.

The garden is owned and cultivated by Charles H. Cook, sixty three, a brass worker, who for many years has been a tenant of the old Jordan mansion at No. 1234 Washington street, South End.

A wooden gate leads directly off from the street into the side plot of ground beside the old colonial house, and, gazing through the fence bars, passers-by rub their eyes and stare again at the sight of morning glories twining up the sides of the old, dilapidated house and waving tassels of maize flourishing in trim rows.

LABORED LONG AND HARD.

The house in which Mr. Cook lives has lost all vestiges of its former beauty, its paint is worn and weather-beaten and one half of it has been turned into a tombstone shop.

But five years ago Mr. Cook decided to take over the patch of ground beside the house and attempt to beautify it. The soil was poor and for the first two years it was a struggle to grow even a blade of grass. Early and late the gardener labored, mornings before his work and in the evenings after supper.

COLONY RESTORED.

As a result the garden thrived steadily, and every Summer Mr. Cook takes choice ears of golden bantam corn to the neighbors and they in turn lean over the fence and offer neighborly advice about garden equipment, bugs, and watering.

Besides the corn and morning-glory specialties in Mr. Cook's garden, pansies, beans and sweet-peas also are in evidence. The latter, Mr. Cook has induced to twine about the Colonial doorstep, and the old Jordan house has regained some of its former charm, basking in the light of the adjoining garden.

ALFRED LEE MORGAN DEAD IN PROVIDENCE

Bristol, R. I., July 6 (A.P.).—Word has been received here of the death in Providence of Prof. Alfred Lee Morgan, professor of economics and for the last fifteen years head of the department of commerce in Robert College, Constantinople. He had just arrived from Constantinople.

Professor Morgan was born in Wilton, Conn., in 1873, and was graduated from Oberlin College, Ohio.

STEEPLEJACK HURT WHEN AUTO OVERTURNS

Attleboro, July 6.—Patrick McCormick, twenty-two, of No. 1460 Washington street, Boston, a steeplejack, who boasts of never having had a fall through years of hazardous work, was injured seriously early when the automobile which he was operating overturned at Valentine Corner here.

WHEELS LOCK, AUTO HITS POLE, 2 KILLED

Syracuse, N. Y., July 6 (A.P.).—Two persons were instantly killed and two others were injured when the wheels of their car locked while rounding a curve on the Syracuse-Watertown road.

The machine crashed into a telegraph pole and ripped off the entire left side.

COL. COOLIDGE COMING FOR OPERATION

Swampscott, July 6.—It was learned at White Court, Summer home of President Coolidge, that Colonel John Coolidge, the President's aged father, would probably be brought to Boston from his home in Plymouth, Vt., within the next two weeks for another operation.

Major J. F. Coupal, White House physician is still in Plymouth, attending Colonel Coolidge and is keeping the President constantly informed of the patient's condition. His recent reports show a remarkably quick progress toward health.

The President arranged for his father to go to Boston for an examination recently when the elder Coolidge first showed signs of ill health.

Much against his wishes, the Colonel went to the Hub and submitted to an examination and left the same day for Plymouth.

The Colonel seemed well on the road to recovery until the President and his party arrived at White Court, when he suddenly took a turn for the worse. The chief executive cancelled all engagements and rushed to his father's bedside, bringing Dr. Coupal with him, and remained until he had been assured that there was no immediate danger of the illness proving fatal.

CHURCH IN DRIVE ON DIVORCEES

Fight Against Marriage After Divorce to Be Carried to Episcopal Sessions

New York, July 6 (Universal).—Declaring that marriage after divorce is unscriptural and contrary to the practice of the early Christian church, the Sanctity of Marriage Society inaugurated a movement today which has for its purpose the barring of marriages of all divorced persons in the Protestant Episcopal Church.

A petition has been drawn up and is being sent by this organization to the general convention of the Episcopal church, to be held in New Orleans in October.

The Sanctity of Marriage Society is headed by the Rev. Dr. Milo H. Gates, vicar of the Chapel of the Intercession, Trinity parish, and its executive committee includes Bishop William T. Manning.

The particular canon of the Episcopal church which is assailed by the society, is that which allows innocent parties in divorces based on infidelity to remarry.

The proviso to the canon forbidding the remarriage of divorced persons is as follows:

"This canon shall not be held to apply to the innocent party in a divorce for adultery, provided, that before the application for such remarriage a period of not less than one year shall have elapsed after the granting of such divorce; and that satisfactory evidence touching the facts in the case, including a copy of the court's decree, and record if practicable, with proof that the defendant was personally served or appeared in the action, be laid before the ecclesiastical authority, and such ecclesiastical authority, having taken legal action thereon, shall have declared in writing that in his judgment the case of the applicant conforms to the requirements of the canon; and provided, further, that it shall be within the discretion of any minister to decline to solemnize any marriage."

The canon itself is:

"No minister, knowingly after due inquiry, shall solemnize the marriage of any person who has been or is the husband or the wife of any other person living from whom he or she has been divorced for any cause arising after marriage. Nor shall it be lawful for any member of this church to enter upon a marriage when either of the contracting parties is the husband or the wife of any other person then living from whom he or she has been divorced for any cause arising after marriage."

WHY HAS A GIRAFFE GOT SUCH A LONG NECK ??

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

BECAUSE HIS HEAD IS SO FAR FROM THE GROUND, SILLY!!

TIBBETTS IS HARVARD'S GREATEST TWO-MILER

WORKING THROUGH COLLEGE

Elected to Lead Crimson Team After Sensational Season on Cinder Path

Willard Tibbetts, a diminutive lad from South Boston, achieved the highest track team honor at Harvard a week ago when the members of the varsity track team elected him to lead the 1926 team. Tibbetts was chosen as successor to "Heine" Dunker immediately after the recent Harvard-Yale dual meet.

It was while he was a member of the South Boston High School track team that Tibbetts started his track career. Handicapped by his size, Tibbetts was forced to compete as an intermediate, as he was not tall enough to be rated as a senior. In his high school days, Tibbetts ran in the 600-yard event, as that was the longest distance that the intermediates were allowed to run.

After graduation from South Boston High, Tibbets went to Worcester Academy, where he began to run on the cross-country team. He found that he was better fitted to run in the long distance events than the shorter events that he used to run at South Boston High.

All during the season Tibbetts was a consistent scorer in the dual meets and also in the Harvard Interscholastic Meet.

The following year Tibbetts entered Harvard and started running on the freshman cross-country team that Fall and before the end of the season he was the fastest man on the freshman team.

When the outdoor track season came around "Tibbie," as his friends at Harvard call him, reported to Coach Farrell as a candidate for the two-mile run. As a result of his training over the cross country distances, the two-mile event was just right for him. "Tibbie" won all the two-mile races in the early season meets with great ease as he was far superior to all his competitors.

In the final meet of the season the Harvard-Yale freshmen met, he made such remarkable time that the varsity coaches decided that he should be given a chance to make the combined Harvard-Yale team that was to meet the combined Oxford-Cambridge team later in the season.

Tibbetts made his first real bid for fame when he raced against Vanderpyle of Yale for a place on the Harvard-Yale team that was to go over to London to meet the combined teams of Oxford and Cambridge. "Tibbie" set his heart on making the trip with the result that he set such a heart-breaking pace in the opening laps of the two-mile race that he forced his older and more experienced rival to quit. Tibbetts finished the race in very fast time and made the trip across, much to the delight of his fellow track associates at Harvard.

As a result of making the trip to England in his freshman year, the Harvard Athletic Association awarded him a varsity "H." From that time on Tibbetts has been the best long-distance runner at college.

Last Summer Tibbetts proved that he was one of the best two-milers in the United States by winning a place on the American Olympic team. Because of his remarkable running, Tibbetts was able to win trips abroad for two consecutive Summers.

This past year at Harvard Willard made a very wonderful record by winning the indoor intercollegiate two-mile title, the two-mile race at the outdoor intercollegiates, and last, but not least, the two-mile race at the recent Harvard-Yale dual meet.

Because of all these fine accomplishments, combined with his winning pedsonality, the members of the Harvard track team elected him to captain the 1926 team.

Tibbetts, who is working his way through college, makes some money in his spare moments by playing the piano in different dance orchestras. Last Spring he played the piano in the Hasty Pudding show and at the same time he was a member of the Harvard four-mile relay team.

As the Hasty Pudding show was scheduled to play in New York city the same night as the Penn relay games, Tibbie had to hop a train down from New York to Philadelphia, run in the relay race for Harvard, then jump a train back to New York in order to take part in the evening performance at New York.

Certainly this is a very creditable record for a little fellow only 5 feet 4 inches tall. In spite of his small statue, Tibbetts has made a name for himself as the greatest two-miler that ever represented Harvard on the cinder track.

FERRIS AND LEVINE PLAN A. A. U. MEETS

Dan Ferris and Ben Levine did not make the trip to California for the National championship. The two A. A. U. men are needed in the New York office, while the big men are away. Both are already mapping out plans for the Fall season.

BRAVES REAL JINX TO NEW YORK CLUBS

Brooklyn, July 6.—The Boston Braves may occupy last place in the standing in the National League, but you couldn't prove it by anybody here in the domain of Father Knickerbocker.

The standing of the clubs to the contrary, the outfit headed by Davy Bancroft has been the chief stumbling block for both the New York Giants and the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The Boston jinx laid heavy upon the Giants just before Memorial Day, when the McGrawmen traveled to Braves Field and were beaten in three games out of four. A week or so ago at the Polo Grounds the Braves kicked the Giants right out of the lead by winning two out of three.

Yesterday morning the Brooklyn Dodgers gloried in a winning streak of five straight games. They had just finished kicking the figurative tar out of the Giants in a three-game series and were all set to wallop Bancroft's men in a double-header.

But the Braves spoiled it all by doing all the wallopinfg that was done at Ebberts Field. They won both games by scores of 4 to 1 and 4 to 2.

The chief trouble maker for the Dodgers was none other than Gus Felix, who contributed a sparkling catch and three singles in the first game and repeated the sparkling catch and hit a single and a home run in the second contest.

Hussey Aids N. Y. A. C. Break Mark

San Francisco, July 6. (A. P.)—In the closing events of the National A. A. U. track and field championships here, New York Athletic Club made a clean sweep of the relay races. Harold Osborne, star of the Illinois Athletic Club, won the Decathlon, the individual all-around title.

The quartet of dash men established a new world's record in the 440 when they ran it in 41 2-5s. This team consisted of Frank Hussey, Jackson Scholz, J. Todd and J. O. Macdonald.

The New York relay men tied another world's record, that of the 880, 1 minute 27 2-5 seconds. These four were Scholz, McDonald, Allan Woodring and J. Tierney.

The two and four-mile grinds were between New York and Hollywood only and Hollywood was forced to take second place on both occasions.

BRAVES HOME TO TAKE ON THE WEST

By NICK FLATLEY.

Nick Flatley

The Braves are home, to sooth their shattered spirits in the calm and peaceful atmosphere of the Wigwam. They rest today and open with the Cards tomorrow. They will linger in Boston's delightful, at times, Summer for the rest of the month, entertain their Western rivals, and strive with their cheering earnestness, to reform and get into winning habits. Whatever their failings, the Bancrofts always try to get somewhere. They are defeated quite frequently, as you know, but they are always kicking when their shoulders are pinned to the mat. They haven't the deliberate, unstudied practice of accepting disaster that marks some other losing teams. The Braves, matter of fact, are sort of a mystery team.

Opposing managers and umpires, the boys who watch them steadily, can't understand why the club has sunk so low. It is the unanimous verdict that Dave Bancroft has a better club than Boston has possessed for quite a few years. The experts expect the club to fare well, and the upheavals are surprising.

What we think is that the club lacks just the least little kick. It has the spirit and the ambition. It's pretty well fortified in various spots. It has been hitting well, but not in a winning way. Teams drift along like that at times. The bunching of hits is psychological, as much as anything else.

Once a team starts co-ordinating, as the professors call it, with the war club, it proceeds to sail ahead. The Braves haven't been getting together in that little thing. They're likely to, any time. Team slumps are the same as individual flops—incomprehensible, and likely to disappear any time.

THERE are certain indications of a better fate ahead of the club. Bernie Neis, one of the finest centrefielders that patrols the broad Wigwam, has started to hit the ball. If he can get his base blows, he'll be a wonderful asset. He was away off in the early months, but on the road trip just ended he began to clip the marble. He made two homers in one game, and spattered regulation hits around as well. He was down on his luck and low spirited in the early part of the campaign. He told us sincerely one day that he would jump out a window and knock himself off, but he was sure that somebody would be walking underneath with a mattress when he tried. Neis' speed, attached to a bit of a sock, may be the spark that will touch things off. Teams have been made by little things like that.

• • •

LARRY BENTON, after sitting on the bench for a couple of years and winding up ball games, has blossomed forth as a real pitcher and is evidently set to win a lot of pastimes before collegians start kicking footballs around. Larry has pitched three hangup games in a row, which is more than most star pitchers have been able to do this season.

ENGLISH STARS WORK OUT AT STADIUM

The Oxford and Cambridge athletes took their first workout on the Harvard Stadium track this morning and they are scheduled to be back on the cinders again this afternoon.

The Englishmen landed in New York yesterday morning and were rushed over here and are quartered at the Ocean House in Swampscott. As the international meet will be held next Saturday, the Britishers will have two workouts a day until Thursday.

Although the visitors are in fairly good condition, they have not participated in a meet since the inter-university Cambridge - Oxford classic last March.

The loss of D. M. Johnson, the Canadian quarter-miler, was a blow to the British team. Johnson was ordered by his doctor to quit the running game for a year. Johnson made a fine showing in the last Olympics and he was expected to give Captain Gage and Paulson of Yale a fine battle in the double furlong.

Bill Stevenson, the former Princeton track captain, was not at the Stadium this morning. He went to Princeton upon landing in New York yesterday and will not report until tomorrow. Among the other English absentees were Porritt, the sprinter, who was a point winner in the last Olympics, and Campbell. They sailed from Liverpool on the Mauretania yesterday and will not be here until Friday.

Helen Is Eager for Lenglen Match

New York, July 6 (A.P.)—Miss Helen Wills, national women's tennis champion, who is practicing at Forest Hills for major net events of the Eastern season, looks forward to a meeting next year with the Wimbledon champion, Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen.

Arriving here, unheralded, from her home in Berkeley, Cal., Miss Wills expressed the hope that she would have an opportunity of opposing the French star if the United States Lawn Tennis Association should send a team to England in 1926. Should such a match not be provided then, she will look for it two years hence, upon her graduation from the University of California, when she plans to study abroad.

As to her chance of defeating Mlle. Lenglen, Miss Wills hazarded this opinion: "Perhaps I will beat her when she grows old."

Miss Wills plans to compete next week at the Longwood Cricket Club, Brookline, Mass., and, later, at Manchester, Mass., whence she will go to Seabright, N. J.

To observers at Forest Hills she appeared more slender than when she won the championship last year for the second time. Her game a revealed in practice with Gerald Stratford, a classmate at the University of California, was excellent.

Trotter Stop Over at Springfield

By GUS DALY.

Everything is all set for the visit of the trotters and pacers of the Bay State circuit at the Eastern States track at Springfield for three days of the sport, which begins Thursday, July 9, and continues through Saturday.

This is without doubt the fastest and finest two-lap track in the country.

It is a bit early for any of the horses who have been engaged in the past four weeks on the circuit to ship away.

Thursday's program: Two-year-old trot, $800; 2.12 pace, $1,000; 2.19 trot, $1,000.

Friday, July 3rd: Three-year-old trot, $1,000; 2.15 pace, $1,000; 2.15 trot, $1,000.

Saturday, July 11th: 2.09 pace, $800; 2.12 trot, $1,000; 2.05 pace, $800, 2.09 trot, $800.

The past week's racing at Windsor, Ct., held at Sage Park, was the most successful one ever held at this track, and the attendance exceeded all expectations and the big purses attracted some of the best that the South and West has to offer.

• • •

Billy Fleming has been working some of his racers of late but it is doubtful if he will engage in a race for at least three weeks.

• • •

The Boston mare, Kittie Belwyn, has shown fine class in her past three attempts, always in the money and has been racing with some of the best trotters in the East.

• • •

Jim Hennessey, of Boston, has gone for his annual vacation in the Pine Tree State. He had his good George Harvester, trotter, and Bonnie Gift both shipped away from Combination Park in the best of form and should score quite often.

• • •

Ensign Tige, which won the Sage Park $10,000 stake trot, was formerly campaigned by Nat Ray, the old time steeplechase jockey. The Canadians who came along with the "Tige" horse profited handsomely, for Bee Worthy had a million supporters who fell to a man.

Ed McGrath, the Penn State reinsman, leads all of his brother drivers so far on the Bay State circuit up to date.

GIRL SWIMMING STARS BREAK RECORDS

New York, July 6.—A new American record for breaststroke swimming by Miss Agnes Geraghty of the Women's Swimming Association, and victories in the senior and junior Metropolitan A. A. U. 110-yard, free-style championships by Miss Adelaide Lambert and Miss Helen Meany of the same organization featured a water carnival at Bay Shore, L. I.

Miss Geraghty bettered the breaststroke standard for 100 meters, in a handicap at 110 yards (two laps of the 55-yard course). The event brought together three members of the American Olympic team of last Summer. The others were Miss Matilda Schuerich of the Women's S. A. and Miss Eleanor Coleman of the Milwaukee A. C.

Allowing two seconds to the former and three to the latter, Miss Geraghty overtook them before the turn, then gradually drew away and won by five feet in 1:34 2-5, beating her own long course record of 1:35 1-5, set over the same Bay Shore stretch in September, 1924.

KING SOLOMON TO RELY ON LEFT IN MALONEY GO

SHARKEY SIGNS TO BOX WILLS

Bout Planned for Michigan City; Flowers to Tackle McCarthy at Braves Field

By JACK CONWAY

KING SOLOMON bows in this week. The Jewish heavyweight sensation is billed to meet Jim Maloney of South Boston in a feature ten-round bout at a show to be staged by the Suffolk A. A. at Braves Field on Friday night.

Solomon is the heavyweight champion of Central America. He has [illegible] bouts since coming to America. [illegible] He first polished off Quintin Romero Rojas and then thumped around [illegible] The Stone fight [illegible] Sailor Maxted.

John Conway

The Stone fight was the real test for Solomon. Ad defeated Stribling last Fall, scoring with a knockdown late in the match. Solomon was the first [illegible] decision over [illegible] Phil[illegible]

New York [illegible] writer Solomon [illegible] left hand [illegible] as a western [illegible] shooting [illegible] The King's right hand is [illegible]

Jack Sharkey showed Maloney can be beaten by a left hand. When Sharkey and Maloney [illegible] former [illegible] boxed [illegible] chiefly on [illegible] ity.

Maloney [illegible] crush the opposition which gives a good boxer with a sharp left hand a fine chance to defeat him.

Solomon will left-hand Maloney to death or else be knocked out, is the way the bout looks to those who have seen the two men in action. It's another case of a boxer against a fighter.

FLOYD FITZSIMMONS, promoter of the boxing shows at Michigan City, has signed Jack Sharkey, New England heavyweight champion, for a ten-round bout which will be staged this Summer. Fitzsimmons [illegible] New York and will make an attempt to secure Harry Wills as Sharkey's opponent. Johnny Buckley, Sharkey's manager, has already agreed to terms for a Wills-Sharkey bout. If Wills refuses to meet Sharkey Fitzsimmons says he will secure Gene Tunney to battle the local favorite.

Sharkey also has offers for bouts on the Pacific Coast.

WALK MILLER, manager of Tiger Flowers, told the writer while in New York that he has virtually agreed to terms for a match between the Southern sensation and Pat McCarthy to be staged at Braves Field under the direction of the Suffolk A. A. Miller said Matchmaker [illegible] of the Suffolk Club is prepared to guarantee the Tiger [illegible] and also give him the privilege of accepting 30 per cent. of the gate receipts.

McCarthy is by far the best fighter Flowers has been called upon to meet in a Boston ring. Pat proved in his recent winning fuss with Hambone Kelley that he is batting better right now than at any time during his career.

EDDIE MACK was one of the few who picked Dave Shade to win over Jimmy Slattery. Slattery was a 4 to 1 favorite, which is another reason the short enders are smiling.

Madden to Box at Fort Banks

Jimmy Madden of Roxbury, former amateur champion, will make his bow at Fort Banks Thursday night when he clashes with Jose Dominguez of Argentina, who has been cleaning up in heavyweight ranks.

This bout was clinched by Lieutenant Glass and it is expected that it will prove the magnet to attract a huge throng to the ringside.

Three other bouts also have been arranged. Don Vasquaza of Porto Rico will meet Johnny Murphy of Charlestown. Jeff Mason of Dallas, Tex., will clash with Young Jimmy Briggs of Chelsea, while Pal Sneaf of Terre Haute, Ind., takes on Jimmy Malias of Charlestown.

In case of rain the show will be held on Saturday, July 11. Popular prices will prevail.

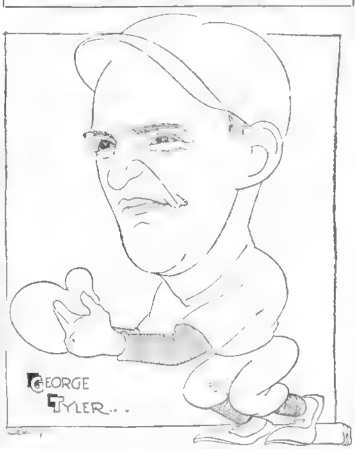
TWILIGHT STARS---NO. 4



GEORGE TYLER...

George "Lefty" Tyler, who was one of the trio of pitching stars that led the Braves to a world's championship back in 1914, is still going strong in the diamond pastime. He is holding down first base for the Checker Taxi nine in the "Twi" League and is doing a pretty good job around the initial sack. Occasionally his arms feels quite fit and he hops over to his first love, the mound. On his last appearance on the hill, he turned back Nashua, which was some feat, the leaders having only lost one game previous to that time.

Capital Prize Race on Third Week

Today the third week's race opens in the scramble for the capital prize in the Boston Evening American's baseball players' identity contest.

The subject for the qualifying letters this week is, "Who Will Win the Flag, Pirates or Giants, and Why?"

Hop to it, fans, and let us hear from you on this subject. The National League race seems to be tightening [illegible] it closely.

"Here's a good, snappy subject that ought to bring out some of the snappiest letters of the whole contest so far.

Each week until further notice there will be, in addition to the daily award of five pairs of tickets for the earliest and neatest correct identification of the masked ball player, a weekly capital prize. This prize means a grandstand seat for the rest of the season at one of the local parks.

This capital prize will be awarded to the fan who wins one of the [illegible] and who, in addition, sends [illegible] prize winning identification [illegible] neatest 100-word letter on the subject announced herein.

INSIDE GOLF

So often is the golfer admonished to follow through with the clubhead that many players, seeking to accomplish the follow-through, bring about in the bottom arc of the swing an arm-stiffening reaching exertion that has the effect [illegible] just at the time when it should have its springiest punch. They accomplish a fol[illegible]

[illegible] This action gives the feeling of the clubhead hitting straight through the ball, which is not quite the feeling it should have. You should have a sense of hitting down on the ball as the clubhead takes the ball. Then the follow-through will come naturally and automatically.

Jack Expects 3 Fights in Year

By HAYDEN TALBOT

Universal Service Staff Correspondent

London, July 6.—Just a few minutes after Mr. and Mrs. Jack Dempsey left by motor to catch the boat train on their way to Paris, a cablegram arrived for the champion. The message was opened by Harry Preston, who discovered that it was important enough to attempt to overtake Dempsey.

This seems like complete verification of the long standing rumor [illegible] Dempsey [illegible] his "fight manager."

It also seems to corroborate Dempsey's statement to Universal Service following his exhibition at Brighton that he is determined to have three fights within the next year with the first battle not later than September.

At a supper party at which Harry Preston was host, in private conversation, Dempsey declared:

"You can tell the world that I am going to get in three fights between [illegible] July. I will be in [illegible] her, probably with Tex Rickard as promoter, although it will not necessarily be h[illegible]

Sally [illegible] pushed the rug off her knees. Etta and the chauffeur were standing by the car talking. Sally looked past them and [illegible]

"Etta, where are we?"

Etta Shaw turned. Her voice sounded high and nervous.

"Such a stupid mistake," she said. "He didn't understand, and it was so foggy I never noticed which way we came out of London. This is [illegible] You have to stay the night with me instead of my staying with you." She ended as she had begun with "Such a stupid mistake" and a light [illegible] Sally felt suddenly [illegible] Only what would the [illegible] would we, what would [illegible] think? What had possessed her to sleep like that? She [illegible] up the rug and got out stiffly. They passed through the door in the wall, the chauffeur following. Sally's arm was taken as she entered the house.

Etta went on talking.

The foreign name arrested Sally's attention, [illegible] it from vexed thoughts of [illegible] She turned and looked with faint interest at the [illegible] good-looking chauffeur. His [illegible] regular features were [illegible]

His glance at Sally was a bold one as he came forward with his hands up to take the rug from her. Sharp [illegible] his bad manners and at Etta's [illegible] in engaging a man of that type, Sally looked down. She saw the chauffeur's hands palm upwards in the [illegible] and brilliant light—large hands with long, thick fingers, and dark against the pallor of the palm, a jagged, cross-shaped scar.

"Oh," said Sally, on a little indrawn breath; and with that sound and that breath her power to move and cry went from her. The rug dropped from her hands. She tried to get her breath, to scream, to move, and as she tried and found herself numb with the nightmare sense of helplessness, the man she [illegible] caught her by the arm and the hand with the scar covered her mouth.

As a matter of fact, that is the idea—that you "congratulate" the new [illegible] he got such a wonderful girl.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I visit my intended mother-in-law quite often, and have always been a welcome guest. I would like to show my appreciation of her kindness toward me at my next visit, and have the gift of giving her a little gift. Can you please suggest what kind of gift would be most suitable? She is a woman about sixty.

MISS X.

I THINK that there is no gift in which one can express one's taste and sense of appropriateness so easily and satisfactorily as a purse. Would that interest you to give to this lady who has been so kind to you? I am sure that she will deeply appreciate your friendliness and generosity and I am sure that she would love a handsome purse. How about a black silk moire small envelope purse? It would add a delightful personal touch if you have her monogram put on it in gold letters to be attached, or in gilt initials. Or you might have some small sheer, dainty handkerchiefs embroidered with her monogram.

WHY is "Soapine" best for soaking clothes?

Tests at Brown University furnish scientific proof

1 Exhaustive experiments with a solution of Soapine and water at the biological laboratory of Brown University proved that "Soapine really destroys germs—all kinds—even typhoid."

2 After 820 careful tests Dr. Z. R. Bliss also reported the further amazing fact that: Cotton fabrics soaked in Soapine actually increased in strength an average of 1.52 per cent.

Billion boxes already sold

Women long have known there is nothing like Soapine for getting clothes really clean by soaking. That is why they always use it for the family wash—for things very soiled and for greasy fabrics. This famous old soap powder gently, but firmly, loosens every particle of dirt and grease. And for this reason alone its sales have reached the astonishing total of a billion boxes.

Now comes science to prove that Soapine actually makes clothes wear longer. To demonstrate that there are no disease-breeding germs on your clothes when washed with Soapine. If you want an easy, healthy and economical way to wash, use Soapine! Use it for general cleaning too. Genuine Soapine shows a whale on the package. Get it at your grocer's today. Louise Groody has gone to work. It seems that during all these [illegible] at the Tremont Theatre where, in the active stellar role of "No, No, Nanette," she has sung, danced, acted, laughed and dimpled her way into the hearts of an admiring public, she has "been on a vacation."

Now all these outside energies are at an end. They have been declared [illegible] out." It is her own dictum. For now, beginning last Monday the days formerly given over to "playing around" find her hard at it in the studio of Senia Russakoff. "ROSE-MARIE" BREAKS ALL LONDON RECORDS

In drawing $35,000 to the Drury Lane Theatre in London [in] one week "Rose Marie" has broken all musical records in the history of England, concerning which the newspapers there have evinced a lively interest. From their accounts not even the mighty "Chu Chin Chow," which gave 2,235 performances in London, ever approached this figure by the sands.

Arthur Hammerstein declares credit is due to Sir Alfred Butt for his temerity in accepting "Rose Marie" for London production against the judgment of the Drury Lane directors who predicted an "instant flop" for a foreign musical show new to England. In fact, such a dispute arose between Butt and Basil Dean, equally noted in London theatricals, and the latter severed a 15-year partnership rather than pass upon "Rose Marie."

While on a visit to New York to view the show, Dean drew severe censure for an unethical statement in a newspaper interview, that "Rose Marie" would be a dismal failure in London. Dean, who is not at all unpopular in theatricals, has since apologized to Arthur Hammerstein for his thoughtless action.

NORUMBEGA NOW IN FULL SWING

LOVE AND DUELS HAVE CALL AT THE FENWAY

Dukes and duels and love and a tailor who longed to be a gentleman are some of the elements of "Eve's Secret" now playing at the Fenway, in which pretty Betty Compson appears in the title role.

The play is an adaptation of Zoe Akins's "Moonflower" and has a delightful atmosphere of intrigue and suspense. The story hinges on the way in which the Duke of [illegible] chooses his wife. As he has to marry to have some one to bear his title he decides that he will choose his own wife and that she [illegible] be a nice girl not of the women of his set.

So he takes the pretty niece of the village [illegible] and educates and clothes her in order to fit her for [illegible] she will occupy as his wife. Eve, however, turns out to be so beautiful that every man in [illegible] [illegible] by [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] with [illegible]

The companion picture is Evelyn Brent in "Smooth as Satin."

AMERICA HOLDS ITS OWN IN FRISKY ARTS

"See America First, then see Europe," advises Ivan Bankoff of the team of Bankoff and Cannon, dancers at Keith's Theatre this week. "And if you're a dancer, be doubly sure to follow this advice," he continues. "American dances, taken as a whole, are the greatest in the world," says Mr. Bankoff, "and the dancers of the United States, for all-round work, are the best."

ITALIAN OPERA STAR ON BILL AT ORPHEUM

Guido Ciccolini, the Italian tenor who appears as one of the headliners this week's vaudeville at the Orpheum Theatre, is a son of a prominent Italian family and the only man [illegible] household to [illegible] career [illegible] well known in Boston [illegible] was here [illegible] years ago that he appeared in grand opera at the [illegible] Theatre. Since that time [illegible] has appeared with [illegible] organizations including the Chicago Opera Company.

FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

Los Angeles, Calif., July 5.—"You can't leave without going to Catalina Island and trying your luck at catching tuna fish," Marco Hellman, leading California banker, has just told me.

"If I try to catch a tuna fish I'll have to miss writing a column," I replied.

Heads were laid together. It so happened that I had talked a streak to a gathering for banking and business leaders arranged by the local clearing house and the Chamber of Commerce and that the newspapers had made some mention of the meeting. So George Young, the resourceful publisher of the Los Angeles Examiner volunteered to patch up some sort of column from his paper's account of the talk-fest.

Very glady I turned over the job of supplying the rest of today's column. I'm off tuna hunting.

"You of the coast are making a new empire," Mr. Forbe's auditors were told. "Of late you have hit the right note in developing manufactures. The highest civilization is not from agriculture, but from manufactures—production of the finished article.

"I doubt if many of you appreciate what astonishing progress your city has made in that way.

"You have a furniture concern that sells more goods than any other one establishment in the world.

"Since I was here three years ago your population has increased 400,000, a record not over five other cities in the world can equal.

"You of Los Angeles are more solid than ever before.

"There is one thing that you should go after; that is to induce the railways to cut down the time between you and us.

"Millions of people in the East have limited time for vacations and to spend eight or nine days of the time in the cars is foolish waste.

"In time the flying ship will solve the problem, but you cannot wait for that.

"You should have the same rapid passenger service to the Coast that we have between New York and Chicago.

"I wonder if in the bustle of your great business and efforts if enough of you give thought to the finer things of life, that the people expect from leaders?

"One day when I was playing golf with John D. Rockefeller, he said a very wise thing. 'Next to the importance of doing the right thing is letting the people know that you are doing the right thing.'"

NEW HAVEN OUT AFTER TRAFFIC IN LIVE STYLE

By FRANK H. MELOON,
(Financial Editor)

New Haven Railroad is out after traffic in live style. Passenger Traffic Manager F. C. Coley is spreading the slogan "Avoid the Congested Highways" and advertising the merits of New Haven service. It has been a long while since the railroads of New England obtained anything like the amount of advertising they are getting today, what with the establishment of bus service and the general booming of railroading. Naturally they are reaping worthwhile returns.

There is an interesting artist's drawing of Nantucket being used to bring tourists to that good and quaint resort. The drawing might well ornament the cover of "The Parade of the Wooden Soldiers," for it looks like a real toy town. Incidentally, if you travel by bus, it's going to be hard to "Avoid the Congested Highway."

* * *

Speaking of artist's drawings, it would probably interest President Edgar of Edison Electric to know that the big drawings of the completed Edison plant at North Weymouth, displayed on the grounds last year, led some people to imagine the district was going to be a second Pittsburgh.

As a matter of fact, the new North Weymouth Edison plant is today surrounded by prettily improved grounds, like the other local Edison plant, and there is less smoke visible from the great station opposite Fore River than from the stacks of the average passing steamship.

Max Winkler, of Moody's Investment Service, calculates that American investments abroad at the end of this year will total $12,000,000,000. Clearly he means private investments, not including our government war-time loans. These reach a paper total of about another $12,000,000,000, though that sum probably will never be collected, either through franc defalcation or through lenient terms which amount to a reduction of the principal. The magnitude of our foreign investments still surprises most Americans; the novelty of being a creditor nation has not yet worn off.

Ice Cream Is Fifty Years Old and Going Strong

Ice cream is fifty years old and going strong.

George W. Butler, veteran broker of the No. 25 Broad street clan, declares it took fifty years for the companies identified with ice cream making to get on the list of the New York Stock Exchange, although some of them have long been on the Chicago, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh markets.

He remembers when ice cream was first sold in 1876 at the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia and was popularized among children and grownups. He says it was of slow growth, however, and it was not until 1890 that big companies were formed to engage in the ice cream business.

But let us remember that before the World War Great Britain, with only two-fifths of our population, held, according to the best estimates, about $20,000,0000,0000 in foreign investments. And the dollars of 1914 were worth more than those we are now advancing to foreigners. Thus Great Britain was then a greater creditor nation than we even approach being today.

Fred W. Sargent, new president of Chicago & Northwestern, says: "Most important thing right now is a rate level that will enable railroads of Northwestern territory to earn not only 5¾ per cent. contemplated by Transportation Act, but a surplus that can be diverted to additions and betterments. I believe our shippers and Commerce Commission recognize this and are willing to grant a moderate increase. Stockholders are entitled to better return. In no year since the war have railroads in our territory earned anywhere near 5¾ per cent., and even such an amount if earned would be too low. Supreme Court has held in various cases that a return of less than 7 per cent. or 8 per cent. as applied to public utilities is confiscatory."

DIVIDEND IS PASSED BY REYNOLDS SPRING

Reynolds Spring Co. passed quarterly dividend of 25 cents on common due at this time. President W. R. Reynolds says: "It is deemed both in the interests of the company and stockholders to conserve cash and surplus and to utilize the same to increase future earnings. During the current quarter bank indebtedness of $190,000 on April 30 was paid off."

VIRGINIA CAROLINA TO ESCAPE ASSESSMENTS

Rapid progress is being made in formulating the reorganization plan of the Virginia Carolina Chemical Company, only a few minor details requiring adjustments. No assessment will be made on the various stocks and no new money will be raised.

The $24,500,000 first mortgage 7s will be reduced about $10,000,000 by paying off about $40 principal of each bond from the proceeds of the sale of the Southern Cotton Oil Company and phosphate properties in Germany, reducing the face value of the bonds to less than $14,500,000.

FORD OF CANADA TAKES UP WORK IN AUSTRALIA

Ford Motor Co. of Canada, Ltd., through its subsidiary companies, Ford Mfg. Co., of Australia Proprietary, Ltd., and Ford Motor Co. of Australia Proprietary, Ltd., has taken over the assembly and distribution of its products in Australia. These Australian companies are each capitalized at 1,500,000 pounds, and are erecting five plants to take care of the growing Ford business.

Establishment of the two companies gives the Canadian company its second subsidiary organization overseas, the other being in Port Elizabeth, South Africa.

AUSTRIAN PROVINCES TO SEEK AMERICAN LOAN

Governor Rinteled of Province of Syria, who is conducting negotiations, has succeeded in lining up two more provinces, Burgenland and Lower Austria.

RAYON WILL GO ON CURB AGAIN

Bonner, Brooks & Co., who headed the syndicate which recently sold 50,000 shares of American Rayon Products Corporation at $22 a share, stated they were in accord with and recommended the temporary suspension of trading in the issue by the New York Curb. They believed this a wise move, due to connection in the public mind between the operations of the market in American Rayon and Dean, Onatavia & Co.

"We believed," Frank Bonner stated, "that it would be to the best interests of the stockholders to suspend trading in the stock for a few days to avoid short selling by speculative element and liquidation by the more timid who were not in possession of complete facts.

"In actuality, Dean, Onativia & Co. were only indirectly connected with operations in this stock and the amount of stock held by them is estimated to be less than 2,000 shares.

The stock will be traded in "over-the-counter" market until it is again placed on the Curb in next three or four days.

Sales Friday of American Rayon ranged between 38 and 40 with little stock offered.

Within the next 10 days earning statement for first six months will be public. This statement will show the company to be in good financial position, according to Mr. Bonner.

STRIKE WOULD CREATE HARD COAL SHORTAGE

American survey shows that if anthracite coal strike should occur there will be a shortage in Fall. Only in Scranton, Pa., with 1,000,000 tons is there any large amount of anthracite held. Lackawanna Railroad has between 200,000 and 300,000 tons and the Delaware & Hudson something over 500,000 tons. Shenandoah, Pa., reports there is no coal stored except small quantities of buckwheat. In Mount Carmel district there is no domestic coal in storage and less than 200,000 tons of steam sizes.

HAND-TO-MOUTH BUYING FOUND OBJECTIONABLE

In answer to questionnaire sent out by Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland, general opinion of fifty manufacturers is that "hand-to-mouth" policy of buying is objectionable. They point out that it is impossible to plan ahead, that operations on small number of units is more expensive than on large number, that manufacturer has to bear many expenses of stocking that should be borne by wholesaler, and in some cases it means that manufacturers are rushed at one season beyond reason and have to shut down rest of the time.

Fix the Blame for Boston's Most Disgraceful Disaster!

DISTRICT ATTORNEY O'BRIEN

TO THE District Attorney for Suffolk County, to the Mayor of Boston and to the Governor of Massachusetts the people have a right to look for an immediate investigation and for prompt action in the light of all the facts.

The Boston Evening American hopes that the people will not look in vain.

"Government is protection" reads the shortest definition of government extant. That which fails to protect the people is not government—it is a travesty on government, as District Attorney O'Brien, Mayor Curley and Governor Fuller know full well.

MAYOR CURLEY

RESPECT for the dead—half a hundred or more—justice to the living and jealousy for the good name of their home city and their capital city would seem to demand that the people of Boston and their fellow-citizens throughout the Commonwealth unite in an honest and fearless determination to bring before the bar of justice those chiefly to blame for this disaster and to bring before the bar of public opinion every official—municipal, county or State—who attempts to draw a red herring across the trail of the investigation.

GOVERNOR FULLER

BECAUSE it was easily preventable the collapse of the building that housed the Boston dance hall doing business under the name of the "Pickwick Club" is utterly indefensible.

Only the veteran buck-passers of a crooked or pusillanimous officialdom will have the impudence even to suggest an excuse for a crime against the public of the city of Boston that is a disgrace to the citizenry of Massachusetts.

Only those who have been made cowardly by the gnawing of a guilty conscience will attempt an alibi for themselves or for those whom they would protect from the righteous indignation of an outraged public.

Hijacker or Law Officer?

How Can the Citizen Tell?

How is a man driving an automobile to know a "hijacker" from a Federal prohibition agent? Truck drivers were ordered to stop, and took it for granted that prohibition agents were holding them up. They were bound and gagged, taken to vacant lot, and their trucks, with loads worth $25,000, were taken from them.

The peaceful "non-bootlegging" driver of an automobile sees a light flash in his face and is told to stop. He stops and finds that he is dealing with a prohibition agent. If the latter turns out to be an agent who doesn't happen to combine highway robbery with prohibition activities so much the better.

If he turns out to be a bandit the citizen must suffer the consequences.

Wouldn't it be a good idea to catch bootleggers at the start or the end of the run, and allow ordinary citizens to drive along the highways with a knowledge that if they are held up it is by bandits and they should act accordingly?

For Fathers and Mothers

A Warning That Many Need

Dr. Abbott, the very able headmaster of the Lawrenceville School, writes earnestly on the liquor drinking problem as it affects the young. He says, "There should be an investigation of liquor drinking in the colleges of our nation."

And he adds, "Loving youth as I do, I am deeply distressed at the amount of drinking done among the boys and girls of our nation. I wonder if you know how prevalent it is among girls of tender age."

Fathers and mothers should heed that warning. Some that least suspect it need it most. It comes from a man in whose school of 600 boys liquor is unknown, the boys themselves, for the honor of the school, demanding immediate expulsion of any boy that touches a drop of liquor.

If bootleg liquor did nothing more harmful than killing off those that whiskey had claimed long ago it would be bad enough. But if bootlegging and prohibition combined make necessary such a warning as this, it is an extremely serious matter. Killing off OLD drunkards is one thing. Poisoning the young is 1,000 times worse.

Tax Proof Cellar

Successor to the Cyclone Pit

The most precious thing in the West, when Colonel Coates ran the old Coates House in Kansas City, and the dark yellow, funnel shaped cyclone cloud came drifting down the Missouri and climbed up the heights and across the town, was the CYCLONE CELLAR. There the Colonel led his guests, and they didn't move SLOWLY.

The cyclone cellar was in those days what the tax free securities are now. It is a real pleasure to see the men of big incomes struggling toward New Jersey's recent issue of tax exempt bonds and bidding them up to record prices. Those tax free bonds, ground out one million dollars' worth a year, are the cyclone cellar of the very rich.

Religion Too Easy

The Rev. Dr. Davis says: "Religion is made too EASY." He observes that three men dropped from the Stock Exchange, presumably for dishonesty, were members of Christian churches, but the churches didn't expel them.

That is SOUND criticism. The Reverend Doctor thinks the radio will make religion even easier and deplores it. That perhaps is not sound. All of God's gifts can be made useful.

But isn't the one important thing to make an impression on the wicked mind of man?

Causing the fig tree to wither because it has no fruit, if it were done today, might be criticized as undignified by dignified clergymen. They criticized Henry Ward Beecher when he sold a good looking slave girl at public auction in his church to arouse hatred of slavery, telling plainly why such girls were bought.

Whatever makes men THINK is good education.

Whatever makes them REPENT is good religion.

Other Wants

Mrs. F. E. W., Salem, Mass., would appreciate a crib or small cot for 10-months-old baby; also a few dresses for herself, size 36 or 38.

Mrs. H. 2, widow with two small children, girl 22 months and baby a few weeks old, finds it very difficult to get along, and would appreciate an ice chest or baby carriage; also clothing for herself, size 38, shoes 3½. Has been sick since arrival of baby and therefore not able to work.

Mrs. V. W. would appreciate a coal stove, crib and mattress. Cannot afford to buy these things.

Lillian M. writes father has gone to a T. B. camp and there are six little children. Boys size shoes 2½ and 13, girl sizes 2½ and 12. Baby six months needs clothes. Mother needs aprons very badly. Girls 8 and 12 needs dresses. Will appreciate any help.

Mrs. E. A., mother of three children, husband making small wages, would appreciate a twin baby carriage.

Mrs. M. E. 3, in need, writes she has a small place at Revere Beach and thought perhaps some kind readers would be willing to pay her a small fee to change their bathing suits in her house instead of going to the bathhouses.

Victoria, without work and money, would like a place to do cooking or general housework.

Mrs. N. L., along in years, not able to work steadily on account of rheumatism, would appreciate a coat and other clothing, size 44, and shoes, size 6.

Mrs. M. J. D., East Boston, wishes to thank Mrs. E. B. W., Rockville, Ct., for the lovely box of clothing. They were needed very badly.

Mrs. M. E. 1 needs clothing, size 40, and shoes, 4½, for herself, for boy six, girl eight.

A working woman will gladly share her camp with some poor woman or couple who would like to get into the woods and rough it for the Summer. Ten cent carfare to Boston.

HOW TO BE PLEASING WITH OTHERS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

A RECENT article by Lucian Cary emphasizes the fact that if you want to have charm, it is essential to acknowledge your weakness.

It will be found with most of us that we are embarrassed simply because we wish to have credit for more capacity than we really have.

One is ashamed for his lack of wit and conversational powers not because he does not have them, but because he wants to seem to have them before other people.

The root of most embarrassment is vanity.

The cure for most embarrassment is entire honesty with one's self and with others.

A man's faults should be confessed to himself. They should be recognized as a part of his limitations. A confessed fault is already forgiven.

If you are ignorant, says Mr. Cary, that is not offensive to other people because they are pleased to have you ask them for information. It flatters them. But if you do not know a thing, yet pretend that you do, you are likely to be made ridiculous.

Not only must we confess our own weakness, but we must recognize and deal with the weaknesses of others. Everybody has some faults. And if we do not expect perfection of them we shall get along better with them.

When one asks you if you have read such and such a book say no if you have not. The pretense that you have read it may often lead you into a trap.

If you are asked whether you have seen a certain plan and you have not seen it, say so.

So in equal frank manner you should acknowledge it if you have not visited certain countries or places. Allow other people to enjoy their distinction of having been somewhere that you have not.

Honesty, frankness, humility and lack of egotism are the foundation of poise and ease. You will never be easy until you have ceased trying to seem to be what you are not.

EINSTEIN BOTHERS HIGH SCHOOL BOY

By Garrett P. Serviss.

"I am a junior in high school, and although I do not fully understand Einstein's theory of gravitation, I am extremely interested by it. I should like to know the formula, or equation, for bending the path of light of a star passing close by the sun, which Einstein used in his calculation.

"Also, is the attack on Einstein's theory by Captain T. J. J. See groundless, or is it the beginning of the abandonment of Einstein's theory for that of Newton.—E. P., Medway, Mass."

ANYONE who wishes to follow in the path of Einstein, handling his equations and testing his calculations, must begin by mastering the mathematical methods that he employed.

These are not taught in ordinary text books and cannot be correctly represented by ordinary mathematical process.

Besides, Einstein's theory involves hyper geometrical, or, one may say, anti geometrical conceptions (such as four dimensional space, or "time-space") which appear contrary to common sense and human experience.

Captain See is by no means alone in refusing to accept Einsteinism. Many physicists and astronomers look askance at it, if they do not absolutely reject it. But too many mathematicians have seized upon it with eagerness and helped enthusiastically to develop it, to permit us to believe that it is going to be abandoned.

Captain See himself, however, is a mathematician, and his dissent, together with that of others, shows how much depends upon the point of view.

Year after year goes by, and still nothing is added to the confirmatory evidence from physical facts that Einstein was so openly anxious to obtain when he proclaimed his theory.

And the three or four slender lines of apparent confirmation that were selected at the start have not yet been so thoroughly established as to be universally recognized.

One of these is the bending of the rays of starlight that nearly graze the sun on their way to the earth. In the first place, there are some critics who refuse to accept the photographic evidence, and the interpretation of it, on which is based the assertion that this phenomenon is an absolute confirmation of Einstein's theory.

The case for Einstein is weakened by the fact that his explanation of the bending of the light-rays is not by any means the only possible one, while (so much the worse for it) it is the only one not based on well known facts and laws of physics.

Newton's theory of gravitation shows that starlight grazing the sun must be deviated, by virtue of the very reasonable assumption that light has weight, like every other physical thing.

The only discrepancy is that the amount of the deviation calculated by the Newtonian formula is only half that calculated by Einstein, while the experiments so far made during eclipses seem to show that the actual deviation is twice as great as the Newtonian formula would make it.

One of the most obvious explanations, entirely rejected by the Einsteinians, but still defended by others, is that there may be some refracting medium close around the sun which produces the extra deviation.
